FROM GEN. M'CLELLAN'S ARMY.

Our Forces Still in Possession of Malvern Hill.

THE POSITION TO BE RETAINED.

Reported Intention of the Rebels to Retake it.

Heavy Reinforcements Sent to Gen. Hooker.

THE GUNBOATS GONE UP THE RIVER.

Arrival of Three Thousand Exchanged Prisoners.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, THURSDAY, Aug. 7, 1862.

At Malvern Hill everything was quiet during yesterday.

It was reported last night by deserters and contrabands that the rebels had been moving from the vicinity of Richmond all day in large force towards Malvern, with a view of retaking that position.

Three thousand exchanged prisoners arrived yesterday afternoon from Richmond. Those belonging to this army and fit to do duty were sent to their regiments. The others will leave for the North to-day. No officers were among the party.

There is no truth in the statement that this army is used to protect rebel property, as reported in the case of Mr. HILL CARTER. During the two days' battle of Malvern Hill, from 800 to 1,600 wounded Union soldiers had their wounds dressed at his house, the ladies freely tearing up their sheets and pillow-cases for bandages. While the army was passing, a guard was posted to protect the women and children. Our horses and cattle are grazed on his farm, and his negroes are working on our fortifications. All applications for their return have been refused.

OUR SPECIAL ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Details of the Movement to Malvern Hill—The Expedition Under Command of Gen. Hooker—The Enemy Apprised of Our Approach—Our Artillery Practice Too Much for Them—Toombs Turns Tail—The Rebel Rams, &c.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Wednesday, Aug. 6, 1862.

An important movement took place yesterday, resulting in the Union troops reoccupying Malvern Hill, after an artillery fight of about an hour and a half. The loss was light on both sides.

At 6 o'clock Monday evening Gens. HOOKER'S and SUMNER'S Divisions, the Sixth United States and Eighth Illinois Cavalry, and BRAMHALL'S, BENSON'S TYNDALE'S and DE RUSY'S Batteries, the entire force being under command of Gen. HOOKER, left our line of fortifications, struck upon the Charles City road, and proceeded by that route toward Malvern Hill. Between 11 and 12 P. M. the force arrived at Nelson's Farm, at which place they bivouacked for the remainder of the night, with the intention of early in the morning getting, between Malvern Hill and Richmond on the New-Market road so as to cut off the rebel retreat, and successfully attack the enemy on the Hill. The men were in high spirits, full of energy and demonstrated in several ways that they heartily relished the undertaking. Although they had traveled a distance of twelve miles, the hours of march were so fitly chosen that they reached Nelson's Farm without exhaustion or fatigue, and were enabled to spread their blankets on the ground, and enjoy the luxury of a few hours' sleep before resuming the march, and commencing the attack in the morning.

Nelson's Farm is distant about four miles from Malvern Hill. Our force stationed pickets in every direction, and the utmost vigilance was exercised to prevent surprises.

The enemy was also on the alert, and, according to the statements of prisoners, had been made aware of our presence and intentions, either by information given by their own pickets, or through some other channel. A rebel picket was shot three-fourths of a mile from the Union bivouac. The prisoners assert that they knew sufficiently of our movements at 12 o'clock Friday night, to fully appreciate their hazardous position and make arrangements for reinforcements. Consequently, Gen. TOOMBS' Division, which was encamped some five miles north of Malvern Hill, was notified of the condition of affairs, and received orders to join the force on Malvern Hill at a certain hour the next morning.

At daylight our men were up and ready, and shortly after proceeded toward the north side of Malvern Hill. When arrived within about a mile of the Hill, the enemy opened upon them with shell and solid shot from four pieces of field artillery. The firing commenced at a little before 7 o'clock. BENSON'S and BRAMHALL'S batteries of six pieces each were immediately got into position, and a rapid, vigorous fire was returned for that of the enemy. The firing was continued till about 8 o'clock, as fast as the men could load and discharge the guns, when the enemy withdrew his pieces. Little loss was sustained on either side. Among our wounded is Capt. BENSON, of BENSON'S Battery, who was struck in the chest and leg by a shell discharged from one of his own guns.

The fight was wholly with the artillery, the infantry acting as supports.

When the enemy had ceased firing, our men advanced to and occupied the Hill. We captured sixty of the rebel infantry. The rebel force amounted to two regiments of infantry, two of cavalry, and four pieces of artillery. Nearly the entire force managed to escape towards Richmond by taking a road running along the bank of the James River. We had no knowledge of the road, consequently it was unguarded. TOOMBS did not get his force to the Hill from the fact of his being behind time, or because the Union force was ahead of him. He was coming up the New-Market road at the time our force was marching up to occupy the Hill. This was a complete cut-out on our part. TOOMBS did not venture to follow, but wheeled his men right about, and marched back in double-quick toward his camp.

While the artillery were engaged, our cavalry were scouring the woods in all directions, but did not meet with the enemy in force. A stray fragment of shell seriously wounded Lieut.-Col. GAMBLE, of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry. He was struck in the chest.

The enemy had some slight earthworks on Malvern Hill, but they were on the south side, or the side facing Turkey Bend, and, of course, were of no benefit to them.

From an exterior line at Berkley to Malvern Hill it is five miles by a direct road.

Four stragglers, belonging to SEDGWICK'S Division, while roaming in the woods, came across six mounted rebel cavalry, whom the stragglers took prisoners. They disarmed them, made them dismount, and rode their horses into camp.

Gen. MCCLELLAN and staff came up to Malvern Hill in the afternoon, and remained all night. COUCH'S Division was sent up to reinforce HOOKER during the night. It is rumored another division will be sent up this morning. We intend to permanently hold Malvern Hill.

The rebel rams have disappeared up James River.

Our gunboats went up some distance beyond Malvern Hill yesterday, and shelled a rebel encampment, but with what result is not yet known.

I have just ascertained that our loss yesterday was six or seven killed and twenty-four wounded.

OUR FORTRESS MONROE CORRESPONDENCE.

Excitement at Fortress Monroe—Returned Union Prisoners—What They Say of Richmond—Treason and Crinoline—A Secesh Parson—Affairs at Nassau—British "Neutrality."

OLD POINT, Wednesday, Aug. 6, 1862.

The reports brought by the James River mail boat yesterday—to the effect that three whole divisions of our army had actually engaged the enemy,—that firing was still going on when the boat left, and that we had taken possession of Malvern Hill,—have naturally created no little stir here, and the arrival of this afternoon's boat is expected with much anxiety.

I had a long conversation this morning with several very intelligent men among our returned prisoners from Richmond, now on board the Louisiana. These all repeat the assertions I have before made as to the disgusting filthiness of the pest-houses in which they were thrust at Richmond, and the wretched treatment that our men receive who are unfortunate enough to get into the power of the rebels. They were ultimately confined in a prison at a place called Belle Island—about a mile from Richmond—and state that we have yet over three thousand prisoners in the same locality, and some five or six hundred yet remaining in the Tobacco-house prisons. Col. CORCORAN is at Salisbury, N. C.

Upon inquiring as to the truth of a pestilence having actually broken out at Richmond, they said that, although nothing was more probable, they had heard nothing of it when they left. They, however, represent the city as being in a terrible state of misery, sickness and anarchy, and that there are symptoms of its yet meeting the fate of another Sodom or Gomorrah—not directly with fire from an avenging Heaven, but from spontaneous combustion among the vile elements which compose the rebel capital. My informants, however, scout the idea of Richmond having been evacuated. They say that for "evacuated," we should rather read reinforced, for troops were constantly coming in, up to the hour of their departure.

One very significant fact was brought to my notice, and that is, that even in this hot-bed and headquarters of traitors United States notes are at a vast premium. $15 and even $20 of Confederate paper are greedily offered for $10 of our paper money, if any one can be found green enough to barter it away for Confederate trash. Many mentioned it as very remarkable that they could never hear one word about BEAUREGARD. Where he is, what he is doing, whether dead or alive, nobody seemed to know. We certainly must give the rebels credit for keeping their own secrets admirably. Imagine the outside world being unable to determine even as to the existence of MCCLELLAN, BURNSIDE or POPE! Our men—with the chivalry which belongs to all true soldiers—speak in high terms of "Stonewall" JACKSON, rebel as he is. They not only admire his dash and bravery, but those who have come in contact with him, personally, speak of him highly as a man. They say that one secret of the esprit de corps to be found among the rebel forces, is the kindly intercourse between their officers and the men under them. To use the expression of one of them—"Their officers are not as stuck up as ours generally are."

The Louisiana brought with her quite a batch of treason in petticoats from Richmond—several female rebels having had the audacity to come as far as Harrison's Landing with the intention of going to Norfolk and elsewhere within our lines. When challenged by the Provost-Marshal there, as to their sentiments, and found to be Secesh of the first water, they could not be persuaded that rebellious crinoline had no "right" to go where it likes under a flag of truce, and became perfectly obstreperous when politely informed that, since they refused to take the oath of allegiance, they would be taken back to Richmond. Two of them—Norfolk ladies, with two brothers in the rebel service, one a Captain and the other a Lieutenant—showed off the haughtiest airs on board the vessel, fancying themselves, no doubt, a couple of beautiful Cleopatras on board one of their own galleys. The only room that could be appropriated to them being without a lock, they commanded that one should be immediately put on. On being assured that that was impossible, as there were no hardware facilities on board a hospital transport, their indignant ladyships bounced off, with noses raised to an angle of 45 degrees, and vowing they would rather stay all night on the open deck—which they did; and it is to be hoped their temper was thereby well cooled off.

Among the rebel party so impudently trying to smuggle themselves into our lines was a preacher, from somewhere down in Dixie. He wanted to go to New-York, and, when asked if he were a Unionist, proudly replied that he owed no allegiance but to the South. "Then you must go back to Richmond," said the Provost. "But I must go to New-York, Sir," replied the undaunted hero of the white choker; "I have a bad throat, and wish to see a distinguished New-York physician." "No matter what your personal inconvenience may be," said the impurturbable Provost; "unless your loyalty is proved, I return you to Richmond"—and he was returned. Had the Provost been a wag, and the dignity of his office had permitted the joke, what a splendid opportunity must have been presented for suggesting an effectual remedy—a little Kentucky hemp—for the throat of this divine rebel!

I see, by your Nassau letter of July 29, that the question of the pirate Orvieto had not yet been settled, and, judging by the way that England is showing her "neutrality" in those waters, the chances are ten to one in favor of her acquittal. The officers of the Adirondack have given me full accounts of the Orvieto. They say she is a truly splendid vessel, bark-rigged, and pierced for 16 guns. It is strange that England should be blowing hot and cold in this manner, at one time seizing the Orvieto, under neutral law, and putting a prize crew on board, for adjudication; at other times, with eyes wide open, allowing her vessels to take arms, ammunition, stores, and all the rebels require, direct to the ports of Charleston and Savannah. The officers of the Adirondack confirm all that your Nassau correspondent says of large British steamers being now in Nassau, ready to start in aid of the rebels.

What are our war vessels doing? How comes it that the Adirondack is, at this time, ordered away from her post and no United States man-of-war left to pounce upon these piratical vessels? One of the officers of the Adirondack said to me, only yesterday, "If we were allowed to take prizes in these waters during the next three months, there would be prize money enough for me to last me the balance of my life." It is easy enough now to understand by what means the wretched destroyers of their country have been kept alive till now. Britannia is the she-wolf from which, Romulus and Remus-like, they have got nourishment, and the port of NASSAU is the dug through which they have been drawing sustenance. If this be "neutrality," the sooner we put a stop to it the better.

Four o'clock, P. M.—The James River boat is just in and, from all we can gather, the affair of Sunday partook more of the character of a skirmish than a battle. The report which now reaches us is that we lost about one hundred in killed, wounded and missing, while the rebels had a large number killed, and we have taken over one hundred as prisoners. It is so far a success on our side as we have driven them back, and got possession of Malvern Hill. Up to the time the boat left there was no rumor of any further engagements.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

FORTRESS MONROE, Wednesday, Aug. 6.

The 3,000 rebel prisoners from Fort Warren and Fort Delaware, went up the river from Harrison's Landing the night before last. A flag of truce boat accompanied them, which returned last evening, and reports that the exchange is being made satisfactorily, and that the same number of Union prisoners from Richmond may be expected down the river to-day or to-morrow, and that the requirements of the Federal Government, in regard to the exchange, has been strictly complied with, which is understood to mean the release of Col. CORCORAN and other Union Officers.

Col. GAMBLE, of the Eighth Illinois, is among the wounded. Other names of the killed and wounded we have not yet been able to obtain.

The mail steamers to Harrison's Landing are convoyed by gunboats.

A list of the sick and wounded may be expected to-morrow, from returned Richmond prisoners.

Departure of a Reconnoissance—It Reaches Raccoon Ford—No White Virginians Will Give Information—Foraging—The Results of the Cavalry Skirmish at Orange—An Incident of the Fight—High Spirits of the Soldiers—Great Events Promised.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ADVANCE, GEN. CRAWFORD'S DIVISION, FAIRFAX, (Culpepper,) Friday, Aug. 1, 1862.

With this day we commence another month in the career of the army of Virginia, under a new commander—one who has not yet been with us, but who has promised, without qualification, that it shall prove a month of stirring deeds—that the rebel enemy shall turn his back to us, and fly hence far southward, to some still undisturbed corner of his rebel home. That such it may prove to be is, of course, the strongest desire of every man in the army. During the month just past, however, as you are well aware, we have not been idle. We have marched and marched, and countermarched—in fact, July has been a month of marches, and, were it not for the censorship, I might add, signifying nothing—resulting in nothing but a large increase of shoeless, blistered feet and broken down horses. But, as there is a censorship, I can only call your attention to that brilliant stroke of strategy—by—telegraph, by which we marched upon Warrenton, Va., instead of Little Washington, Va. Had ubiquitous JACKSON been near enough either point at the time to have been able to study our movements, I think there would have been a digitorial agitation of his cranium for the space of a full hour.

But now we shall have better results. In fact I should have excepted the latter portion of the past month from the implied censure upon the whole. Since we began to move in the direction in which the enemy was likely to be found, every day has brought new and important information of his intentions and his whereabouts. We have met him, in sections, at Sperryville, at this place, at Fredericksburgh, at and beyond Orange, and now we know that his scouts line the opposite shore of the Rapidan, and that he has established a signal station near enough to our advance to observe and transmit our every movement of importance. But of nearly all of these facts I have written somewhat at length before; and as we are just about starting upon another reconnoissance I must make this letter brief. The force consists of portions of several regiments of cavalry under command of Col. DEFOREST, of the Fifth New-York, who is to be accompanied by Gen. CRAWFORD, and between them I rather think we will be afforded more than one opportunity of seeing something worthy of recording. The signal station I have spoken of will, I have no doubt, come down from the neighboring mountain-top; the rebel pickets and scouts will be forced to consider it their duty to make an early report at Headquarters; and if we do not see Gordonsville, we shall, at least, learn something definite of how matters stand at Orange. And yet you know, it is exceedingly difficult to state the result of an excursion into an enemy's country, until you have made it. We may be bagged; who knows? I sincerely hope not, for I had much rather continue to enjoy the fresh air and beautiful scenery of this locality. We may see the imminent propriety of skedaddling; but I trust not, for I am not, even yet, the very best rider in the army; and even the thought of a mad gallop for a hundred miles or so, without resting, is fearful to contemplate. But that broken-winded bugler of ours is sounding to "boot and saddle," upon his asthmatic bugle, and I must be off.

I had almost forgotten to say that the order from the War Department, relative to the death of Ex-President VAN BUREN, was read to the regiments at 10 o'clock, A. M., to-day. A salute was fired at sunrise; half-hour guns were fired during the day, and there will be another salute at sunset.

RACCOON FORD, RAPIDAN RIVER, Saturday, Aug. 2—1 P. M.

Very soon after closing my letter yesterday, we were on the march for Orange—Gen. CRAWFORD, with Col. DE FOREST in command of cavalry, taking the usual road to Orange; and Gen. BAYARD, with a detachment, the road to the right, sometimes called the Elm Farm Road. We reached a point known here as Raccoon Ford, on the Rapidan River, about ten miles from Culpepper, about nightfall, where it was determined we should rest, without having seen anything of the enemy. At the Ford, however, ten of the rebel cavalry showed themselves, but after an exchange of shots, by which there was no injury done, they disappeared. Later in the night, we heard from Gen. BAYARD, who had reached Barnett's Ford. (You can find both positions on LLOYD'S Map of Virginia.) In reaching there, he reports that he had exchanged quite a number of shots with the enemy's pickets, without damage to his command. He had not succeeded in securing any prisoners, for the enemy did not wait for any of his force to come up with them. Both our forces will move this morning directly upon Orange, and if deemed expedient, after the condition of things there and thereabouts is known, it will be held by our troops. We are ordered to be ready to continue the march at 2 P. M., but I do not suppose it will be resumed much before daylight. The further we proceed, the more of the enemy we are likely to meet; and if they are to be met in their own chosen positions, it will, perhaps, be better to have sufficient daylight to see them, as well as to hear from them.

I still see in print and sometimes hear a great deal about latent Union feeling in this region, and, doubtless, you see and hear the same. Don't believe a word of it. I don't believe there is a single white resident within miles and miles of us who is at heart our friend, or friendly to our cause. They talk to us in an apparently friendly way, wherever we appear in force. They regret the war. I have no doubt those who have been foraged on do. They wish matters could be settled "somehow." But how would they have them settled? By crushing out the rebellion, and breaking up the Confederate Government? Oh no, indeed. They would not lift a finger in that direction, nor give us a word of information which could be of service to us. We have yet to meet the first white man in this section who will acknowledge that he has seen or even heard anything of the movements of the rebel forces. Families living within pop-gun distance of where the enemy's pickets have been stationed during the past ten days, and who have, doubtless, fed them, ask us, with well-assumed ignorance, if we think there is any of the enemy near, and whether we think there is any "danger" of JACKSON'S returning with a large force. Innocent creatures! The army has recently learned a new and very effective way of answering such questions. They do it on the good old Connecticut plan, namely, by asking others, such as—How much grain have you got, and where is it? Where are the nearest hay-stacks or grass-fields? How are you off for beef, mutton, hams and bacon? In connection with these and other questions of a similar character, sometimes in relation to young pigs, turkeys, chickens, &c., these rebel residents are generally vouchsafed the information that it is somewhat generally believed in the army that new potatoes and several other vegetables are in season. That's the way we talk in the army. The uniform answer to the above questions is, that all they had has been taken from them, first by the Confederate, and then by the Union armies. Experience has taught that such a statement is not always to be relied on implicitly, consequently, parties are sent to search, and whatever is found that the army needs is taken, and a certificate given for it, with the usual conditions. That's the way we do in the army.

CULPEPPER, Va., Sunday, Aug. 3, 1862.

Since I wrote yesterday in relation to the reconnoissance to Orange under Gen. CRAWFORD, nothing of very special interest has occurred. After the fight in the town, and the retreat of the rebels, we returned to Raccoon Ford, about ten miles from here, where the Fifth New-York Cavalry, First Vermont and First Maryland still remain—the First Michigan returning to this point with Gen. CRAWFORD and Aids. The latest reports from the scene of the fight, together with the statements of the prisoners taken, place the rebel loss in the skirmish at a much more serious figure than was at first supposed. Our loss is as stated yesterday—two killed and twelve wounded; two of the latter, one shot through the head and another through the bowels, will die; and there are three missing. The enemy's loss must have been about twenty-five killed. That number of bodies were counted by our men, who were at different places during the fight, lying dead in the streets of the town, and fifty-two taken prisoners, mostly wounded. So you see it must have been quite a sharp fight, where, out of the numbers engaged, (about six hundred on either side,) so many were killed, wounded and taken prisoners in so short a time. Before proceeding further in my restatement of the fight, I deem it my duty to notice one fact in connection with it, which, under the circumstances, I did not consider worthy of notice in the first account, but which is often spoken of by the men with, I think, undue severity, caused by ignorance of the actual condition of affairs at the time it occurred.

When our troops entered the town, as before stated, Gen. CRAWFORD and Col. DEFOREST were riding immediately in the rear of the advance, Company E, Fifth New-York. When near the other side of the town, the enemy suddenly and unexpectedly opened fire upon the advance, which fell back to near the main column, seeing which the General turned to the main force of cavalry and immediately ordered a charge. For a time not a man moved forward. As I stated before, the main street is one of the crookedest and muddiest streets I ever saw in a town. At the point where the enemy opened fire there is a sharp turn leading to the Gordonsville road. The enemy could not be seen by the main column: the firing was rapid and continuous, and that, together with the falling back of the advance, threw the head of the column into a momentary uncertainty as to what to do. Having heard the order to charge, the First Vermont and First Michigan came dashing up, and the head of the column not moving, they became mixed, and for a few moments there was some confusion, and it must be acknowledged an ignominious skedaddle appeared imminent. It was a trying moment for any one present not confident of his superior horsemanship in retreat. The General, however, with the soldierly assistance of his aids, Lieut. CRAWFORD (his brother,) Capt. DUGAN, of the First Michigan, and Capt. COGSWELL, of the Fifth Connecticut, and Col. DEFOREST, of the Fifth New-York, Senior Colonel in command, and Col. TOMPKINS, First Vermont, soon restored order, and the charge was made gallantly and effectively, as the result shows. It was but a momentary hesitation, caused by an unexpected vigorous attack. The remainder and close of the fight was precisely as I wrote you when it was over, and I need not repeat it here. How long the cavalry will remain at Racoon Ford, or whether an advance of infantry and artillery will be made immediately from here to occupy the town, is difficult to say. Gen. POPE is now with Gen. BANKS, near Little Washington, Va., and, of course, we of the advance must await his orders. I trust that if we do move forward the main force here, I shall be able to inform you as early as the the information can be carried by express or mail, but of that I am not sure, for I have just learned from one of the Association correspondents, who was at Waterloo, where the cloth mill was burned, and where we were water bound for two days, and where Gen. MCDOWELL'S command now is—about eight miles from Warrenton—that the mails were thrown from the cars, and telegraph communication prohibited by order of Gen. POPE on Friday last.

To-day, Gen. BUFORT took command of the cavalry here as "Chief of Cavalry." I understand that to-morrow he takes the position now held by Gen. BAYARD, at Barnett's Ford, and that Gen. BAYARD will proceed to Madison, where there is now, and has for some time been, one of Gen. SIGEL'S infantry regiments.

It would be hard for you to fully appreciate how cheering it is to the soldiers to see and hear of so many movements of the various divisions of the army of Virginia—all, it is believed, looking to an early and grand movement forward against the enemy. With Gen. BANKS', Gen. SIGEL'S, Gen. MCDOWELL'S, and Gen. BURNSIDE'S forces, joined under command of Gen. POPE, I think we will soon be in a position to satisfy the enemy in front that there is an army in Virginia capable of doing its prescribed work.

The lists of the killed, wounded and missing on our side, and killed, wounded and prisoners in the late fight at Orange, which I had thought to embody in this letter, are not yet ready. They will be sent to you by telegraph.

The Reconnoissance by Gen. Crawford to Orange Court-House.

ORANGE COURT-HOUSE, Va., Saturday, Aug. 2, 1862—3 P. M.

My last letter—the letter of this morning—was dated at Raccoon Ford, Rapidan River. As I suspected, we did not move from that point until near daylight this morning. We then moved directly upon Orange, finding no pickets until within six miles of the town, the streets of which are the most crooked and muddy we have yet encountered in a Virginia town. The pickets, as soon as seen, were driven in without loss to us, and very soon afterward we came upon the signal corps I have before spoken of, stationed on the heights to the right of the road, with signals flying. As soon as we came in sight, they were flying, too, and finally escaped. From that point to Orange we saw nothing more of the enemy. We entered the town with a portion of our force, the advance being Col. DEFOREST'S Fifth New-York Cavalry, while two companies of the First Vermont were sent round to the right in order to take position on the other side. Dividing and passing through the town through the main and an adjoining parallel street, (if any two things here can be called parallel to each other,) we had reached the further and outermost edge of the town before coming upon the enemy. There our advance of the Fifth New-York Cavalry was fired upon, Gen. CRAWFORD and Col. DEFOREST being immediately in the rear of the advance, leading the main force. The enemy, as he proved, consisted of about one hundred and fifty infantry and dismounted cavalry, with rifles, and they were immediately reinforced by about four hundred cavalry. The fight here was continued for a brief period briskly, and with considerable effect on both sides. At length a movement of the enemy induced our force to move in the direction of the river, and the rebels taking it for a retreat, returned and followed until upon the edge of the town looking toward Culpepper, when the Vermont Cavalry, having reached the enemy's rear, and our advance getting them out of town, and in range, charged upon them, and they ran for the woods to the right of the place where the charge commenced, and disappeared. We took forty-two prisoners. We lost in the engagement four men of the Fifth New-York Cavalry—who, under the eye of their intrepid Colonel, fought bravely, as they usually do—and twelve men wounded, of the several portions of regiments of cavalry engaged.

The only fault I have heard found, or feel like finding myself, with Gen. CRAWFORD, is that, in order to see personally and generally superintend the movements of the force, he exposed himself too often, and, from his position, too conspicuously, to the fire of the enemy. This, I think, was particularly the case when he received information which induced him to believe that the First Vermont had been cut off. On the receipt of the information he dashed forward by a circuitous route, with a small force, to their rescue. As it proved, he was not injured.

The fight over, and the enemy out of sight in the woods, our troops, as per previous order, returned to this side of the river, at a point which, as it has no name, I could not date from, and consequently have dated from Orange. We have undoubted evidence that the enemy are in very strong force at Gordonsville—some state it as high as 100,000, but I think that too high. But the official dispatches are leaving, and I must close. I will write more fully to-morrow. I send you a paper taken from one of the prisoners, which I have not had time to read.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

The New Stamp Currency Nearly Ready for Circulation.

The Reasons Which Induced the President to Order a Draft.

CONDITION OF AFFAIRS IN KENTUCKY.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Aug. 7.

THE OLD CRY REVIVED.

Apprehensions have been again expressed in some quarters, within the past few days, of danger to Washington. Military men insist that the chronic alarm is groundless. Should the rebels advance, they would find POPE in front and MCCLELLAN promptly in the rear, with BURNSIDE in position, also, to cooperate.

THE NEW STAMP CURRENCY.

Postmaster-Gen. BLAIR states that an abundance of postage-stamp bills, for circulation as small change, will be ready for distribution within the next week. Specimens are here now in the Post-office Department, making a handsome little bill, about one-fourth the size of the Treasury note. Elaborate engraving has been placed on the back of the note, precluding the possibility of counterfeiting by photograph. It is believed they will not be as easily counterfeited as the ordinary Treasury notes. The Postmaster-General is understood to express the opinion that their circulation will produce the immediate reappearance of silver, for the reason that there will then be no motive for hoarding it. Silver may remain at a nominal premium, but nobody will buy it, because stamps will supply all the wants for change, and the holders of silver will therefore use it, rather than hoard it to no purpose.

THE REASONS FOR THE DRAFT.

Persons in a situation to know, assign the following as the chief reasons for the President's resort to drafting:

First—The representations of New-York bankers and capitalists, repeated by one Committee after another, from week to week, and of late with special urgency, that the finances of the country could not stand the slow and extravagant war policy that was being pursued. They demanded, in the strongest possible terms, that the utmost energy of the nation should be put forth, that National exhaustion and the drain of the money might be stopped at once by ending the war.

Second—The urgency of the radical Republicans, who complained bitterly of the President's failure to meet their views on certain points of his policy, and who demanded that if the President would not take their policy, he should at least, if he expected the support of a large portion of the party that elected him, inaugurate some vigorous measures. A very heated interview of this kind last week left the President convinced that he could not keep the loyal people of the North united in support of his measures, unless promptly convinced of their being adequate to the crisis.

Third—Besides the representations of the politicians, the universal demand of the people that the Government should adopt measures likely to secure success.

Fourth—The belief that the rebels had now got their army up to the largest possible number, and were so exhausted that such a force as we could now bring into the field would utterly crush the rebellion.

NO PASSES.

Numerous applications have been made for passes to the Army of the Potomac, but they are invariably refused. It is the request of Gen. MCCLELLAN that private visitors be excluded from the lines. All the sick are to be removed thence; therefore the friends of many of the patients cannot urge the necessity of their presence there for nursing purposes. Passes and permits within other military lines are not so freely given as heretofore, as it is known there have been abuses of privileges, traders having been tempted by large profits to smuggle salt and other necessary supplies into the rebel markets.

MR. BUSTEED APPOINTED A BRIGADIER.

RICHARD BUSTEED, Esq., formerly Corporation Counsel of New-York, and well known for his eloquent and uncompromising advocacy of the Union cause, was to-day appointed a Brigadier-General of Volunteers, with instructions to report to Major-Gen. E. D. MORGAN. The appointment is deemed here a most fortunate one, as Gen. BUSTEED will not only exercise a controlling influence in the recruiting service, but will prove himself an officer worthy the distinction now bestowed upon him. The appointment was urged by Surveyor ANDREWS and Alderman DAYTON, on behalf of a number of prominent New-Yorkers.

THE RECENT AFFAIR OFF NASSAU.

Capt. GANSEVOORT, of the Adrioncack, has informed the Navy Department of the facts attending the recent pursuit by him of the steamer Herald, represented by the Nassau papers to be a British vessel. This pretence afforded an opportunity for the expression of indignation against the alleged outrage by this American officer, from whose statement it appears that the Herald had been running from Nassau to Charleston with warlike supplies, and was returning to Nassau with cotton. She was commanded by a man named COXSETTER, who was formerly Captain of the privateer Jeff. Davis. The chase, however, was not continued within British jurisdiction. The statement additionally confirms the fact that the British flag is systematically used to advance secession interests.

CASSIUS M. CLAY.

CASSIUS M. CLAY is expected here speedily to receive an assignment to a command as Major-General. He has been much talked of as likely to be sent to Cincinnati, to assume command of the new Department of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky.

AFFAIRS IN KENTUCKY.

Prominent Kentuckians here have received assurances that troops shall be crowded into Kentucky as fast as raised in Ohio and Indiana. They said also that the property of rebels should be seized at once, and that all refusing to take the oath of allegiance be driven South.

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE TAX BILL.

The following appointments have been made under the Internal Revenue bill:

New-Hampshire—First District—James M. Lovering, of Exeter, and George M. Herring, of Farmington, Assessors. Third District—Daniel Wheeler, of Oxford, Collector; Calvin May, of Keene, Assessor.

Vermont—First District—Joseph Poland, of Montpelier, Collector; Wm. C. Kittridge, of Fair Haven, Assessor. Second District—Thomas Powers, of Woodstock, Collector; George A. Merrill, of St. Johnsbury, Assessor. Third District—Carlos Baxter, of Burlington, Collector, and Henry Cadmus, of Grand Isle, Assessor.

DISMISSED FROM THE SERVICE.

By direction of the President, the following named officers are dismissed from the service of the United States:

Capt. AMOS STILES, Eighty-first Pennsylvania.
Lieut. ALONZO MILLER, Sixty-first Ohio.
Lieut. JAMES W. DUNLAP, Thirty-eighth New-York.
Lieut. JOSEPH B. CLARK, Thirty-eighth New-York.
Second Lieut. W. C. HUTCHINS, Seventeenth Wisconsin.

ARMY ORDERS.

Major GEORGE E. BALDWIN, additional Paymaster United States army, is assigned to duty as mustering and disbursing officer in the State of New-York, and ordered to report for duty to Major-Gen. E. D. MORGAN.

Surgeon CHARLES MCMILLAN, New-York Volunteers, is ordered to report for duty without delay, and also Maj. GEO. W. WALLACE, Sixth Infantry, to Maj.-Gen. MORGAN.

Brig.-Gen. G. W. DAVIDSON is assigned to temporary duty in the Department of the Mississippi, and is ordered to report without delay to Gen. SCHOFIELD, commanding District of Missouri.

ADMIRAL FOOTE IN HIS NEW POSITION.

Admiral FOOTE has arrived, to enter upon his duties as Chief of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting.

THE HARRISBURGH ARRESTS.

The parties yesterday arrested in Harrisburgh have been brought to Washington, and confined in the Old Capitol Prison.

GEN. ROBT. MCCOOK MURDERED.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, Aug. 7.

A dispatch to the Commercial from Deckerd, Tenn., says that Gen. ROBERT MCCOOK was murdered while riding in his ambulance, day before yesterday, in advance of his brigade.

NASHVILLE, Thursday, Aug. 7.

Gen. ROBT. MCCOOK was shot by a party of guerrillas near Salem, Ala., yesterday, while riding towards Winchester, Tenn., sick, in an ambulance. His remains reached here this evening. Capt. BROOKS was captured. Our force burned the house of the rebel who led them into this ambuscade.

THE WAR IN THE SOUTHWEST.

COMMODORE DAVIS AND GEN. CURTIS TO ACT IN CONCERT.

CAIRO, Wednesday, Aug. 6, 1862.

Commodore DAVIS and Gen. CURTIS are here to consult with the Department in regard to the future movements of the army of the Southwest. In future there will be concert of action between them.

THE RECENT FIGHT NEAR MEMPHIS.

MEMPHIS, Monday, Aug. 4.

The fight on Sunday afternoon between the National reconnoitering party and the rebels was a small affair. About 150 of the latter were surprised in the vicinity of Mooney Creek, and fled at the first fire. Six or seven were killed and several wounded.

MORGAN REPORTED IN KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday, Aug. 7.

The Journal publishes a rumor of MORGAN'S advance into Kentucky, and his capture of Burkesville, with an increased force of cavalry. He expresses the determination to march to the banks of the Ohio River. Military circles here disbelieve the whole story.

MOVEMENTS OF QUANTRELL'S BAND.

ST. JOSEPH, Tuesday, Aug. 5.

A gentleman from Leavenworth reports that the guerrilla leader, QUANTRELL, seized a descending steamer on Sunday evening, and crossed 1,500 men to this side of the river. The military authorities of Fort Leavenworth hearing of the capture, and not knowing QUANTRELL'S strength, sent 100 men down to intercept him, all of whom he captured, and marched on, capturing Liberty. Col. PENNICK had previously evacuated that place, escaping with his command.

An additional force of four companies, with a battery of artillery, was dispatched from Fort Leavenworth yesterday morning, to operate against QUANTRELL.

AFFAIRS IN ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, Thursday, Aug. 7.

Brig.-Gen DAVIDSON assumed command of the district of St. Louis to-day. Col. MERRELL, formerly commandant of this district, has been commissioned a Brigadier-General, and will leave for Northern Missouri this evening, where he will direct operations against the guerrillas.

At a meeting of merchants at the Union Exchange this noon, resolutions were passed closing business houses at 4 P. M., for the purpose of drilling and organizing loyal citizens for military service, and requesting the proper authorities to cause a suspension of business throughout the city after that hour, for a like purpose.

Arrival of the City of Manchester.

SANDY HOOK, Friday, Aug. 8—12:45 A. M.

The steamship City of Manchester has passed this point, and will reach New-York about 2 A. M. Her news has been anticipated.

THE WAR ON THE BORDER.

THE INDIAN EXPEDITION.

Action of Col. Salomon—Disunionists—Report of Col. Salomon—His Manifesto—The Indian Regiments—Position of the Several Bodies of Troops—Plans, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LEAVENWORTH, Kansas, Friday, Aug. 1. 1862.

The conduct of the Indian expedition is now the principal topic of conversation here. It is likely to be a question of great interest, owing to the grave responsibility taken by Brig.-Gen. (late Colonel of the Ninth Wisconsin) SALOMON, in arresting Col. WEER, of the Tenth Kansas, then the senior officer in command. I wrote you of this occurrence in my last. Since then Col. WEER has preferred charges of mutiny against all the officers who were participants in the council which supported Gen. SALOMON in his determination to arrest Col. WEER. Lieut.-Col. RETTILL and Major BURNETT, of the Second Ohio Cavalry, are under arrest; as, also, Col. JUDSON, of the Sixth Kansas, and Capt. NORMAN ALLEN First Kansas Battery. Orders have been sent to Gen. SALOMON, Col. LYNDE of the Ninth Kansas, and other officers, to report here. A Court-martial will be shortly convened for the trial of these cases. Col. BARSTOW, of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry, is President. I have an opportunity of forwarding the following documents, which give Col. SALOMON's reasons for his act more fully than I can, and best illustrate the position of affairs. I have only to say that no one is surprised at the present result. Col. WEER has been notorious for intemperance, and for a violent, dictatorial temper. Many persons knowing these things, have watched with great anxiety the progress of the expedition, and its results up to this episode have been better than expected.

Here is the report of Col. SALOMON to Gen. BLUNT:

HEADQUARTERS INDIAN EXPEDITION,
CAMP ON WOLF CREEK, CHEROKEE NATION,
July 20, 1862.

Brig.-Gen. James G. Blunt, Commanding Department of Kansas:

SIR: I have the honor to report that I have arrested Col. WM. WEER, commanding Indian Expedition, and have assumed command. Among the numerous reasons for this step, a few of the chief are as follows: From the day of our first report to him, we have found him a man abusive and violent in his intercourse with his fellow-officers; notoriously intemperate in habits, entirely disregarding military usages and discipline; always rash in speech, act and orders; refusing to inferior officers and their reports that consideration which is due an officer of the United States Army. Starting from Cowskin Prairie on the 1st inst., we were pushed rapidly forward to the vicinity of Fort Gibson, on the Arkansas River, a distance of one hundred and sixty miles from Fort Scott. No effort was made by him to keep communication open behind us. It seemed he desired none. We had but twenty-three days' rations on hand. As soon as he reached a position on Grand River, fourteen miles from Fort Gibson, his movements suddenly ceased. We could then have crossed the Arkansas River, but it seemed there was no object to be attained, in his judgment, by such a move. There we lay, entirely idle, from the 9th to the 19th. We had at last reached the point when we had but three days' rations on hand. Something must be done. We were in a barren country, with a large force of the enemy in front of us, a large and now impassable river between us, and no news from our train or our base of operations for twelve days. What were we to do? Col. WEER called a council of war, at which he stated that the Arkansas River was now impassable to our forces; that the train containing commissary stores had been expected three days; that three different set of couriers sent out some time previous had entirely failed to report; that he had been twelve days entirely without communication with or from the Department, and that he had received reliable information that a large force of the enemy were moving to our rear via the Verdigris River, for the purpose of cutting off our train. Upon this and other information the council of war decided that our only safety lay in falling back to some point where we could reopen communication and learn the whereabouts of our train of subsistence. To this decision of the council he at the time assented, and said that he would arrange with the commanders of brigades the order of march. Subsequently he issued an order putting the command on half rations, declaring that he would not fall back, and refused utterly, upon my application, to take any steps for the safety or salvation of his command. I could but conclude that the man was either insane or premeditated treachery to his troops; or, perhaps, that his grossly intemperate habits, long continued, had produced idiocy or monomania. In either case the command was imperiled, and a "military necessity" demanded that something be done, and that without delay. I took the only step I believed available to save your troops. I arrested this man, have drawn charges against him, and now hold him subject to your order. On the morning of the 19th I commenced a retrograde march and have fallen back with my main force to this point. You will see by General Order No. 1, herewith forwarded, that I have stationed the First and Second Regiments Indian Home Guards as a corps of observation, along the Grand and Verdigris Rivers, also to guard the fords of the Arkansas. Yesterday evening a courier reached me at Prior Creek with dispatches, saying that a commissary train was at Hudson's Crossing, seventy-five miles north of us, waiting for an additional force as an escort. Information also reaches me this morning that Col. WATTIE, with a force of 1,200 men, passed up the east side of Grand River yesterday for the purpose of cutting off this train. I have sent out strong reconnoitering parties to the east of the river, and if the information proves reliable, will take such further measures as I deem best for its security. I design simply to hold the country we are now in, and will make no important moves, except such as I may deem necessary for the preservation of this command, until I receive specific instructions from you. I send Major BURNETT with a small escort, to make his way through to you. He will give you more at length the position of this command, their condition, &c.

Very respectfully your ob't servant,
F. SALOMON, Colonel 9th Wis. Vol.,
Commanding Indian Expedition.

The following was sent to the various regimental commanders:

HEADQUARTERS, INDIAN EXPEDITION,
CAMP ON GRAND RIVER,
CHEROKEE NATION, July 18, 1862.

To the Commanders of the Different Corps composing the Indian Expedition:

SIRS—In military, as in civil affairs, great and violent wrongs need speedy and certain remedies. The time had arrived, in my judgment, in the history of this expedition, when the greatest wrong ever perpetrated upon any troops, was about to fall with crushing weight upon the noble men composing this command. Some one must act, and that at once, or starvation and capture were the imminent hazard that looked us in the face. As next in command to Col. WEER, and upon his express refusal to move at all for the salvation of his troops, I felt that responsibility resting upon me. I have arrested Col. WEER and have assumed command. The causes leading to this arrest you all know; I need not reiterate them here. Suffice it to say that we are one hundred and sixty miles from our base of operations, almost entirely through an enemy's country, and without communication being kept open behind us. We have been pushed forward thus far by forced and fatiguing marches, under this boiling Southern sun, without any adequate object. By Col. WEER's orders we were forced to encamp where our famishing men were unable to obtain anything but putrid, stinking water, and this after a reconnoitering party sent out by himself had reported that this point was unfit for an encampment. Our reports of disability and unfitness for duty were disregarded. Our cries for help and complaints of unnecessary hardships and sufferings were received with closed ears. Yesterday, a "council of war," convened by the order of Col. WEER, decided that our only safety lay in falling back to some point from which we could reopen communication with our commissary dépôt. Col. WEER overrides and annuls the decision of that council, and announces his determination not to move from this point.

We have but three or four days' rations on hand, and an order is issued by him putting the command on half rations. For nearly two weeks we have had no communication from our rear. We have no knowledge when supply trains will reach us, neither has Col. WEER. Three sets of couriers, dispatched at different times to find these trains and report, so far have made no report. Reliable information has been received that large bodies of the enemy were moving to our rear, and yet we lay here idle. We are now, and ever since our arrival here have been, entirely without vegetables or healthy food for our men. I have stood by with arms folded and seen my men fade and fall away from me like the leaves of Autumn, because I thought myself powerless to save them. I will look upon this scene no longer. I know the responsibility I have assumed. I have acted after careful thought and deliberation. Give me your confidence for a few days, and all that man can do, armed with a pure purpose and a firm faith that he is right, shall be done for the preservation of these troops.

F. SALOMON,
Colonel Ninth Wisconsin Volunteers,
Commanding Indian Expedition.

The present position of the Indian Expedition is perfectly secure. The loyal Indians are encamped at Grand Saline, on Grand River, thirty-three miles north of Fort Gibson. They consist of the First and Second Indian Home Guards, under Col. FURNASS and Col. RITCHIE. A third has been improvised of the Cherokees, who have joined our forces. Col. PHILLIPS is in command. There are about 500 more who desire to serve. These 1,500 recruits are mostly half-breed Cherokees; they are said to be quite intelligent, and will soon be serviceable soldiers. Many of them were impressed into STAND WAITIE's Confederate Regiment. They are all mounted on hardy ponies, and armed with muskets and rifles. This brigade is commanded by Col. FURNASS. A section of the Kansas Battery is also with them. Should these Indians be compelled to retreat further North, thousands of women and children will, in all probability, leave with them. The Cherokees generally have come over. JOHN ROSS is at Park Hill, on the Illinois River, eighteen miles from Gibson and five from Tah-lah-quah. He is on parole. The Indians are very strong in their desire to return, wishing to "fight it out." Thirty miles further to the North, Lieut.-Col. JEWELL, of the Sixth, has command of his own regiment, the Tenth, and two sections of the First Kansas Battery. Gen. SALOMON's command was eight miles further to the North. On Sunday last, all the white troops were expected to unite at Hudson's Crossing, on the Neosho. This is 95 miles from Fort Gibson, and fifty south of Fort Scott. Communication has been reopened, and supplies have reached the camp. Gen. SALOMON had with him the Second Ohio Cavalry, the Ninth Wisconsin, and RABB's Indiana Battery. When Lieut.-Col. JEWELL's command reach him, he will have, with the Second Kansas Cavalry, Col. CLOUD, a force of several thousand men. Col. CLOUD will, in all probability, assume command in the event of Gen. SALOMON's leaving, until Gen. BLUNT arrives.

The rebels have a force of about 3,000 at Fort Davis under Gen. COOPER. The rebel Creeks have retired from the Creek Territory with their women and children into the Choctaw Nation, fourteen miles below Webber's Falls, an important point, which the rebels have fortified. COOPER is a Choctaw, all of which tribe are rebels. MAD INTOSH is at the head of the Creeks, who have one regiment, and STAND WATIE has one of Cherokees.

ALBERT PIKE has a force at a point known as Boggy Dépôt, five miles north of the Red River in the Choctaw Nation, ten from Fort Wachita, and 140 southwest of Fort Gibson. He is reported to have with thirty pieces of artillery, guns taken from the National forts in this region.

The Union troops have accomplished considerable work since their advent, in spite of the disagreement among the commanders. They have secured the loyalty and support of the Cherokees, the wealthiest and most numerous of the Indian tribes. Their timely advent prevented a forced impressment into the rebel army. We have also had several severe engagements, and taken between three and four hundred prisoners, nearly a thousand stand of arms, a large quantity of horses, mules, oxen, camp and garrison equipage, and two supply trains.

The present position of our forces will enable them to maintain themselves and hold all of the eastern territory north of the Canadian River. This is important. Gen. BLUNT will, in all probability, soon assume command. Until then no important movements will be made.

The country may rest assured that this region will not again be abandoned. Kansas has too long and ardently desired the erection of a Free State there to give way now the opportunity offers.

AFFAIRS AT FORTRESS MONROE.

Movement on the James River—Arrival of Wounded Prisoners—A Visit to the Adirondack—True Statement of Her Chase of the Herald at Nassau—Disgraceful State of Affairs at that Nest of Traitors.

From Our Own Correspondent.

OLD POINT, Sunday, Aug. 3, 1862.

The James River boat is just in, and brings intelligence that Gen. SEDGWICK's Division left last night, about 6 o'clock, for their point of destination, and firing was heard this morning, early, but from what cause is not known.

The steam transports Louisiana, with 370 wounded prisoners from Richmond, and the Kennebec with 279 on board, arrived early this morning, with orders from the Medical Director of the army of the Potomac, Surgeon JONAH LETTERMAN, to report to Surgeon R. H. GILBERT, Medical Director of this Department. The slight cases on board the Louisiana, about 120 in number, have been sent to the Chesapeake Hospital. The severe cases will be sent to Philadelphia at an early date. The Kennebec, having only slight cases, has been sent to Point Lookout, a desirable location, where there are the best accommodations and physicians.

I had the pleasure, this morning, of visiting the United States sloop-of-war Adirondack, one of the very finest vessels in the United States service, and which has recently made so much noise in the chase of the Anglo-rebel schooner Herald, off Nassau, N. P. The Adirondack is very heavily armed for her size, having three rifled guns, two 11-inch Dahlgrens, four long 32-pounders, and two 24-pound howitzers. She is in beautiful order; and when she was entering port, at the rate of twelve knots an hour, although her engines were making seventy revolutions per minute, everything was perfectly cool, no water being used on the journals at all. Her engineers feel proud of her, and as I happened to be most hospitably entertained on board, in company with Mr. G. I. BARRY, First Assistant Engineer, and Mr. LOUIS J. ALLEN, Second Assistant Engineer, (the Chief-Engineer, Mr. ALEXANDER HENDERSON, being unfortunately absent,) I am enabled to speak by the book.

The accounts which have been published in New-York papers, from the Nassau journals, relative to the affair of the schooner Herald, is not quite correct. The true version is that the Adirondack, while on her passage from New-York to Nassau, saw this schooner and gave chase, knowing her to be in the employ of the rebels. As they were rapidly approaching Nassau, they had to be careful not to assault her in neutral waters, and this alone saved the wretched little thief. Had she been sighted only two or three miles further out, she must have been captured or sunk. The Nassau papers utter a falsehood when they say that the English man-of-war Greyhound had ordered the Adirondack into port, an order which would, of course, have been treated with utter contempt had it been given. The Greyhound merely sent to inquire if the Adirondack was coming into port, and the answer was in the affirmative. At Nassau, communications again took place between Capt. GANSEVOORT and the Captain of the Greyhound, the latter protesting against our action, and then withdrawing, and again renewing his protest, in which state the matter now rests.

It is only to be regretted that its nearness to port enabled the Herald to escape our cruiser; for the doings at Nassau by the rebels, and countenanced by England's "neutrality," are really outrageous. The officers of the Adirondack assure me that arms and ammunition for rebel use are as openly exhibited and passed about in Nassau, as if they belonged to the English Government, and they say a communication is as regularly kept up between Nassau and Charleston as between New-York and Liverpool. All the supplies hitherto sent to the South are through this channel, and I am assured that when Charleston was attacked it was actually on the point of surrender, for want of ammunition, when a cargo came in from this channel. It has been so a long time past, and when Gov. LETCHER was sending soldiers on to Norfolk, hundreds were sent back because no arms could be got for them, until "neutral" friends of Nassau sent them all they wanted. How long this absurd state of things is to continue nobody knows, but while spending millions upon a nominal blockade of Southern ports, we are allowing Heralds to take the rebels all they want; and this, after the Government has been repeatedly warned by our vigilant Consul at Nassau—Mr. WHITING. No fewer than four heavily-laden schooners at Nassau were ready to leave—openly—for Charleston, when the Adirondack left, and we have not one vessel of war there to look after them. Such neglect is literally scandalous, and the country have a right to ask an explanation.

MR. EVERETT ON THE WAR.

Speech Delivered at a War Meeting in Tremont Temple, Boston, on Wednesday Evening.

I appear before you, fellow-citizens, to offer you some plain reasons for a prompt compliance with the call of the President. I do not propose in what I have to say to take up your time with patriotic commonplaces, but to lay before you a few plain matters of fact, and a few considerations addressed to your understandings.

Let us first look at the state of the country. The war, into which we were forced without preparation, has been carried on actively for about sixteen months, over a territory as extensive as half of Europe, and upon the whole, with great success. Beginning at the North, we have saved Maryland; we have reopened one of the great lines of communication East and West, which had been cut off by the rebels early last year; we hold the Capes which guard the entrance of Chesapeake Bay, and have rekindled upon them the beacons of the world's commerce, which the barbarism of secession had quenched; Fortress Monroe and the Navy-yard at Norfolk, which control the outlet of the great Virginia rivers, are in our hands. The gallant BURNSIDE, with his brave troops, have given us, with the exception of Wilmington, the seacoast of North Carolina, and with it the great inland sounds of that State. I know in military history no brighter example of what may be effected by the indomitable energy of a commander, when supported by the right sort of men, than the success of the expedition against Roanoke Island, shattered as it seemed to be, by that tremendous storm of last November. Admiral DUPONT and his brave blue-jackets have given us Port Royal, the finest harbor on the Southern coast between Lynnhaven Bay and Pensacola; and from Fort Pulaski we command Savannah. An ill-concerted attempt on Charleston has failed, but the whole Southern coast is efficiently blockaded; I say efficiently, for it is physically impossible so to blockade an extensive line of coast, abounding in creeks and inlets, as that a vessel of light draft, propelled by steam, will not occasionally get in or out of a dark night. The same state of things exist in the Gulf of Mexico, where we have wrested Pensacola from the rebels, and the entire coast of the Gulf States is under an efficient blockade. That Mobile has not been captured is merely owing to the fact that the mortar fleet was in greater request elsewhere. Then we have that most magnificent success, the bombardment of Fort Jackson and Fort St. Philip; the capture of New-Orleans, which we owe to PORTER, FARRAGUT and BUTLER, and the admirably-handled expeditions led by them, giving us the command of the outlet of the most extensive system of internal navigation in the world. While this has been going on below, Admiral FOOTE and Capt. DAVIS and their gunboats have swept the noble river down to Vicksburgh; the Cumberland and the Tennessee, far up into Northern Alabama, have been redeemed; and the single City of Vicksburgh, which, without any military operations, will fall with the next flood of the Mississippi, is all that remains under hostile control from the Falls of St. Anthony, for two thousand miles, down to the Gulf. All organized resistance to the Government has been driven out of Kentucky, Missouri and Tennessee, though in a region so vast, and in parts so thinly peopled, it is impossible to prevent the inroad of partisan corps, who dash at midnight into an unprotected town, plunder the houses, and steal the horses of peaceful citizens, vanish at the break of day like a "guilty thing," and then, in flaming bulletins, boast of "capturing a city." Then, too, Western Virginia has, after years of discontent under the oppression of Eastern Virginia, been at length emancipated, and the rebel armies which, a half year ago, threatened Washington and blockaded the Potomac, have been compelled to fall back on Richmond. Rallying their forces from the entire South at that point, they have been able, as might be expected, to hold the Union army in check—not so long, however, very far, as the Russians held the combined forces of England and France in check at Sebastopol; not so long as the armies of France, although NAPOLEON had an Austrian war on his hand at the same time, held WELLINGTON in check within the lines of Torres Vedras; not so long as WASHINGTON was held in check with 15,000 men before Boston by 6,000 British troops, which he allowed to escape without the loss of a man.

Such, fellow-citizens, is the work of a year and a third of this extemporized war, and such the present state of affairs. Where in the history of the world has more been done in a shorter time? All honor, then, I say, to the gallant army and navy of the United States, and their brave and patriotic commanders!

But while the position of affairs at this moment furnishes no ground for discouragement, it does create a necessity for prompt and energetic action on the part of the Government and the People. The enemy has by a levy en masse placed his entire arms-bearing population in the field, a very considerable portion of them Union men forced into the service. A striking proof of this is seen in the fact, that more than ten per cent. of the prisoners of war recently released from Fort Delaware have taken the oath of allegiance to the United States, and refused to go back to the South. With the overwhelming force, placed by this levy at their command, the leaders of the rebellion not only expect to drive McCLELLAN to capitulation or to disastrous retreat, but they propose to invade the Free States in three separate columns, capture Washington, carry the war into Pennsylvania and Ohio, and as much further North as may suit their convenience. The simple question before us is, whether we will allow this to be done; in other words, whether, after all our victories, we will be driven, by a series of disasters inflicting the most dreadful sacrifices of property and life, and disgrace worse than the loss of both, to submit to the demands of the South, and to allow that Union to be broken up which WASHINGTON, in 1796, proclaimed "the main pillar of your real independence, the support of your tranquillity at home, your peace abroad, of your safety, of your prosperity, of that very liberty which you so highly prize."

For consider, fellow-citizens, should the rupture of the States be brought about by violence and civil war, we shall bid a long farewell both to peace at home and to safety abroad. If the Cotton States, or rather a few ambitious political leaders in the Cotton States, had been willing to submit the question of secession fairly to the people of the individual States, and the people had declared in favor of separation, (which it is well known they would not have done, except in South Carolina, and not certainly there;) and if then the question of allowing them to depart peaceably had been brought before a constitutional convention of the United States, the only body competent to decide that question, I, for one, should have been willing to try the experiment—the United States, of course, establishing a suitable boundary and retaining the National arsenals, dock-yards and forts on the coast and at the mouth of the Mississippi, which have, from time to time, been specifically ceded to the Union, and which are necessary for its commercial safety and military defence. I say I should have been willing to let them try the experiment, as the means of retaining the Border States, and averting civil war, and because the seceding States would have been sure, in a year or two, to be on their knees to get back into the Union. All this the leaders well knew, and for this reason they would not permit the question to go to the people. Mr. STEPHENS, in his celebrated speech of the 14th of November, 1860, pleaded for such a reference to a convention of the people, chosen for that object. Mr. TOOMBS said, "I am afraid of conventions." He wanted the vote of the Legislature in favor of secession to go before the people, not simply and fairly, but in this deceptive and irritating form: "Will you submit to Abolition rule, or resist?" Mr. STEPHENS told him that such a mode of putting the question "smacked of unfairness and fraud." "Is that," said he, "a fair way of getting an expression of the people's will on all these questions (of secession)? I think not, for who, in Georgia, is going to submit to Abolition rule?" Now, mark Mr. TOOMBS' confession. When Mr. STEPHENS protested against putting the question of secession in that offensive and intentionally irritating form, and asked "Who in Georgia is going to submit to abolition rule?" Mr. TOOMBS' instant reply was, "The Convention will." Call a Convention of the people to act specifically on the subject of secession, and put it to them in terms expressly designed and best calculated to irritate and disgust them, and they would still vote against it. The same is the case in every other Southern State. I made a remark in Faneuil Hall, two or three weeks ago, to the effect that the States had been driven into secession by an absolute reign of terror, and that there was loyalty enough at the South, wherever it was safe to show it. Some of my friends thought I had stated this too strongly, but a few days ago I received a letter from almost intelligent writer, a Union refugee from one of the South-western States, a member of the seceding Legislature in his own State, in which he says my account of the matter is perfectly true, and that his State was carried out of the Union by menace and terror. It was with extreme difficulty that Northern Alabama was forced into the secession movement. The journals of the past week contain a report from the Colonel of an Indiana regiment stationed at Huntsville in that State, who, having received information that a number of Union men were lurking in the woods, thirty miles south of Decatur, took a sufficient force to afford them protection, and bring them, if they wished it, within the lines of the Union army. On arriving where they lived, none but the women of their families could be found at home; the men had taken refuge in the mountains; but as soon as a message was sent them that they could do so in safety, they came forward to the number of two hundred and enlisted in the Federal army. Col. STRAIGHT mentions in his report that the wife of one of these hardy mountaineers, Mr. CAMPBELL, mounted her horse, rode thirty-five miles and back, seventy miles, in thirty-six hours—bringing with her thirty loyal recruits. I hope Col. STRAIGHT's regimental band hailed them with "The Campbells are Coming." In the National Intelligencer of the 2d of this month there is a communication from a loyal Southern subscriber to that paper, in which he says: "Many persons appear surprised that there has been so slight a manifestation of Union sentiment in those portions of the South that have been occupied by the army, and are inclined rashly to come to the conclusion that no such sentiment in fact exists in those parts. Such is not the case; there are very many men in all parts of the South, who are at this moment, as they have always been, loyal and true to the Union, but they dare not manifest it till they are sure of permanent protection."

And this state of things discloses to you, fellow-citizens, the way in which this unrighteous war was brought about. The leaders in the Cotton States, some of whom have boasted that they have been plotting disunion for thirty years, satisfied themselves at length that they could not carry the people with them on the question of secession, even when put in its most offensive and exasperating terms. They knew, however, that the extreme opinions on State-Rights, taught by Mr. CALHOUN, had gained extensive hold on the Southern mind, especially in Virginia, and their confederates in Richmond had assured them, that the moment a drop of blood was shed, Virginia would take the field in defence of Carolina.

No sooner, therefore, had Carolina seceded, than she began to make preparations for the shedding of blood—not in self-defence, not from any military necessity even of aggression, but on a cold calculation of policy, to draw Virginia and the other Border States into the war. The orators in the British Parliament who have taken the cause of secession under their protection, make a great point of the fact that, before proceeding to acts of violence, South Carolina endeavored to obtain possession of the National forts peaceably. It is true that a farce was first enacted of sending Commissioners to Washington to treat for the purchase of the forts. They knew that the President had no power to sell them; the object was merely to gain a pretence for their bombardment. Maj. ANDERSON saw that he was not safe in Fort Moultrie, and by a masterly movement took possession of Fort Sumter. At this signal all Carolina flew to arms; eleven batteries were erected on the surrounding islands. On the 9th of January the Star of the West, carrying reinforcements to the gallant company in Sumter, the Stars and Stripes flying at the fore, was traitorously fired upon, not by pirates, not by foreign enemies, but in profound peace and by men who pretended to be Americans. The Charleston Mercury, the leading secession journal, was filled with articles designed to goad the assembled forces to an attack on Maj. ANDERSON, and on the 24th of January closed an inflammatory appeal of this kind with the following words, which reveal the whole machinery by which the country has been engineered into this wicked war. "Border States of Southern States will never join us, until we have indicated our power to free ourselves, until we have proved that a garrison of 70 men cannot hold the portal of our commerce. The fate of the Southern Confederacy hangs by the ensign halliards of Fort Sumter."

Mr. LINCOLN was inaugurated, and he declared that no attempt would be made, under his administration, to encroach on the constitutional rights of any of the States. He sent a provision ship to supply the siege-worn company at Fort Sumter, but the batteries of the chivalry fired upon and drove back the unarmed vessel. Major ANDERSON was then summoned to surrender; this he, of course, refused to do; but in an informal conference he told the Confederate leader that, if he was not battered to pieces, he should be starved out in forty-eight hours. They did not want to take the fort by starvation. That would not "fire the Southern heart." Blood, blood was what they wanted. The "Southern Confederacy hung by the halliards of Fort Sumter," and by an act of treason as flagrant as was ever perpetrated, since the arch rebel revolted and "drew after him one-third part of Heaven's sons," that glorious flag which had floated in honor from every sea, and from the snows of the north to the burning plains of Mexico, and which never went down in an equal fight with any foreign foe, now sunk beneath the red-hot cannon balls of an officer who had been educated under its folds—who was then under an oath of allegiance to its service, and was indebted for the gold in his epaulettes to the pay which he had been drawing from the National treasury. Such was the beginning of the war.

The friendly Press of Europe, with an industry and zeal worthy of a better cause, is endeavoring to enlist the sympathy of foreign nations, and to goad their Governments into hostile interference, on the pretence that the United States are waging an unprovoked war of subjugation and conquest. Now let us put a parallel case. Fort Sumter was territorially the property of the United States, and this by special grant. The fort was built on an island ceded to the General Government by the State of South Carolina, and consequently belonged to the United States, then and now, just as much as the District of Columbia does. Now, granting, for the sake of argument, the right of South Carolina to secede (which, of course, we utterly deny,) though she might take herself off, she could not take the forts and islands on which they are built, for these she had solemnly and without reservation ceded to the Union. They accordingly belonged to the United States, to say the least, as much as Gibraltar belongs to England. Now suppose Spain, feeling as she does that this encampment of a foreign Power upon her territory is a standing monument of her weakness and decline—in fact, a great territorial and political eye-sore, should first propose to buy Gibraltar of England, and send commissioners to London to negotiate the purchase, as South Carolina sent agents to Washington to negotiate the purchase of Moultrie and Sumter. The offer, of course, would be rejected with disdain. England would as soon sell to Spain the dock-yard of Woolwich, or the tower of London. Whereupon the commissioners go back to Madrid, and Spain forthwith lays siege to Gibraltar by land and sea, fires upon an unarmed supply-ship sent from England to provision the fortress, and at length, in a time of profound peace, without a shadow of provocation, and for no other reason than that she wants Gibraltar for her own purposes, bombards it, and, more successful than in 1782, reduces and captures it. How many hours would elapse, after the news reached England, before every available ship in the British navy would be under orders to the Spanish coast; and every available soldier in the British army embarked, to wash out this intolerable insult in blood? But this is the precise history of the bombardment of Sumter, except that the outrage, instead of being confined to one Gibraltar, was followed by the surprise and seizure of half a dozen other Gibraltars, belonging to the American Government, and scattered along our coasts and at the mouths of our great rivers.

Take another instance. About twenty-five years ago a long-standing territorial dispute between England and the United States seemed near its crisis. The debateable land was a bit of wilderness in the northeast corner of Maine, which would not have sold at auction for twenty cents an acre. Both Governments claimed it; the United States attempted some exercise of civil jurisdiction; not a drop of blood was shed or threatened to be shed, but before you could turn round, seventeen regiments of British troops were poured into the provinces. Why, not a twelvemonth ago, an armed vessel of the United States, in the exercise of the belligerent right of search, detained a British merchant steamer, and took from her four Americans bound for Europe on an errand of hostility, striking directly at the very existence of the United States. The act was not ordered by the Government of the United States, and it was performed in good faith by the American commander, in what he considered the exercise of an undoubted right by the law of nations. Not a drop of blood was shed, nor a farthing's worth of property injured. For this affront to her flag, as she regarded it, without waiting to know whether it was authorized by the Government of the United States, without a pause to ascertain whether the highly colored statement of the facts was true, in three days after receiving an ex parte exaggerated account of the occurrence, the English Government makes a demand for instant disavowal and apology, dispatches troops for Canada, and commences gigantic preparations for immediate war. Is it not amazing that, at the very moment she is taking these summary steps for the redress of an imaginary affront, her presses, with a near approach to unanimity, are fiercely reproaching the Government and the loyal people of the country, because they have risen in arms against a rebellious combination, ostentatiously announcing itself as a foreign Power, and as such not capturing one Gibraltar, not sending a sheriff into one disputed village, not detaining one Trent;—but bombarding and seizing half-a-dozen forts,—plundering arsenals, dockyards, mints and post-offices throughout the South, raising armies, threatening the capital of the Union, and involving the whole country in a destructive and ruinous war.

Can anything be more unreasonable, unfair and unjust? But, supposing we should shrink before the denunciations of the foreign Press, and the menace of intervention, into which (unsuccessfully as yet) it is striving to goad the Governments of Europe. What should we gain by abandoning the struggle as hopeless, and acknowledging the independence of the Confederacy? In the first place, where will you draw the boundary? Shall we, who a few years ago, and under a Southern lead, were ready to plunge into a war with England for a corner of Maine and a corner of Oregon, shall we give up to a foreign power (for foreign it will then be,) the States of the Chesapeake, the fortresses that command the Gulf of Mexico and the mouth of the Mississippi, and half the territory of the United States? Is it England, who threatened war with Spain, in 1770, for the worthless group of the Falkland Islands, and, in 1790, for the still more remote and, at that time worthless, possession of Nootka Sound, that rebuker of the United States for not surrendering one half of their territory and the most important lines of commerce and military communication at the first tap of the rebel drum? But let the question of boundary pass. Suppose that, yielding to the burden of war, we agree to recognize the Confederacy, give up whatever they choose to take; abandon the Union men of Western Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee, in a word, of the entire South, to the tender mercies of the Confederate leaders, already shown in the most ruthless proscription, how long is peace to last? On what footing will you stand? Recollect they profess to despise you. They describe you as unwarlike, mercenary, cold-blooded, hypocritical—the degenerate progeny of the Puritan stock, born to be ruled by the high-toned, warlike, chivalrous South. The immediate cause of the present war is that your President would not sell them Fort Sumter, which he had no constitutional right to do. This is their way of discussing international affairs, for they claim to be a foreign nation. They make a preposterous demand, with which you could not, if you would, comply; and because you decline, they fire on your flag, bombard and capture your forts, raise an army and march on your capital; and you, outnumbering them in the proportion of twenty-two million to nine million, after a struggle of sixteen months, crowned for the most part with the most brilliant success, at a partial turn of the tide of fortune, are told that you ought to abandon the contest and sue for peace. Ah, my fellow-citizens, is such a course going to insure you peace at home or abroad? Do you think it wise or safe to take this new departure on the voyage of national existence, under these mournful insignia of discomfiture and disaster. Did a nation ever secure an honorable peace by showing that she was unable to sustain herself in a just war? Are you going to say to the South, by actions that speak louder than words, "outnumbering you as we do nearly three to one, surpassing you as we do in the same proportion in all the resources of material wealth, we yet succumb to you? Take back the forts which you ceded to us—we cannot defend them; wrest from us the new States on the Gulf, which we bought with a price, five-sixths of which was paid by our free population; partition our territory; help yourselves to the public lands and dedicate them to Slavery; cut off our great lines at railroad; open and shut the outlet of the mighty rivers which drain our central basins at your pleasure; do what you will with us, we feel that we cannot resist you?" And will they not take us at our word, now and forever? You see already what they consider a cause of war. Enter into an election with them, choose a President whom they don't like, deny their right to trample under foot the Constitution they have all adopted and sworn to support, and refuse to sell them your forts, and they go to war. This is the history of the past, and if they succeed in it, on all the principles of human nature, it will be the history of the future. If, rejecting the mild arbitraments of the Constitution and the laws, almost always administered by themselves, they have chosen to settle this dispute by secession and war, how can we ever live at peace when the umpirage of the Federal Government is withdrawn, and nothing but war remains for the settlement of public disputes. Controversies are sure to spring up between neighboring States. Parting in the manner that the North and South will part, and situated as they are toward each other, these subjects of dispute will forever recur. The South has told you how she means to deal with them. War, instant war, is her alternative. What has hitherto been called the ultima ratio regum, is the prima ratio of secession; she borrows her international law from the highway—a pistol at your head, your purse or your life. She tells you she has made up her mind to secede. You tell her that it is only in a constitutional convention that such a question can be entertained, and she settles that matter by seizing the forts, arsenals and dockyards. "Give us up Sumter." The President replies: "You ceded it to us without reservation—it belongs to the United States; I have no power, no right to surrender it." A besieging army of 10,000 men and eleven blazing batteries knock it about our ears, and that is the point of constitutional law decided. The first question that will arise if you recognize the Confederacy will be on the extradition of fugitive slaves. No independent foreign nation ever thinks of their surrender. They will come in large numbers after the separation; the South will demand that they should be given up; the Personal Liberty bills of the North have been among the great causes of the present rupture. Give them up, she will now say, or Stonewall JACKSON will come and take them. One of the articles of the rebel programme, lately agreed upon at Richmond, is stated to be, "the suppression of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad." Ninety miles of it lie through Virginia; they will, of course, do with it what they please. Ohio may be a little restive under this discipline, but she must submit, or she has got to send an army to keep open this all important route to the seaboard. With a system of free-trade at the South, and moderate protection at the North, smuggling upon a large scale—armed bands of smugglers, like those which desolated Spain for ages—will spring up along our vast frontier. To this you must submit, or it will promptly be wrought up into a cause of war with our belligerent and warm-blooded neighbors. Above all—the Mississippi—the great natural outlet of half the continent—you have got to tear up the treaty by which Louisiana was ceded to the United States—undo the work of JEFFERSON and NAPOLEON, surrender a domain such as Providence never before intrusted to a civilized Government, or you have got to win it back by the sword, for that is the way secession resolves all controversies. In short, fellow-citizens, if this rebellion now succeeds, instead of an honorable and lasting peace, we have but one alternative to look forward to—that of eternal war or eternal humiliation and disgrace, not merely in our relations with the South, whose language towards us already passes all ordinary limits of contumely, but from the nations of the earth. What respect are they likely to pay to the reclamations either of the North or the South, however well founded, when they see us forever clenched at each other's throats, in the gripe of death. In fact, if the madness which has ruled the hour at the South, had not, while it quenched every spark of patriotism, deadened them at the same time to the voice of enlightened self-interest, they would have seen that of all the political suicides ever committed, secession is the most hideous. Bent only on destroying the Union of the States, the South has forgotten that she was striving to overturn a strong and respectable Government, of which she formed an integral part, and reducing herself to the level of a fifth-rate Government, dependent for existence on the exigencies of the cotton market and the toleration of the great Powers of Europe.

Will you, can you, fellow-citizens, submit to these enormous mischiefs? Will you, to escape the burden of the hour, entail upon yourselves and your children the calamities of eternal border strife? Will you deliver up your Union brethren in the Border States and through the South to exile, imprisonment, the scourge and the halter? Will you take upon yourself the doom of "the house divided against itself," with the too probable result, if this disastrous experiment succeeds, of being broken up into still more numerous and still smaller warring fragments? You cannot be so faithless to the duty which Providence has assigned you. The "Palladium of our political salvation," as it was called by your sainted WASHINGTON, has descended from our fathers to us; it must, it shall go down from us to our children. We have nothing to gain, nothing to hope, from the betrayal of the trust—not even present peace, for it is as true of nations as of individuals, that nothing so surely invites to further aggression as to yield to unjust demands.

THE SANITARY COMMISSION.

The Loss of Life on the Peninsula and its Causes—Letter from the Executive Committee to the President.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 5, 1862.

Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States:

Mr. PRESIDENT: The great loss of life from other causes than injuries received in battle, during the recent campaign on the Peninsula of Virginia, has excited a mar

PERSONAL.

—Mr. Edson B. Olds, who a few days ago, used language in the course of an address to the citizens of Bern Township, Ohio, which sounded amazingly like treason, has seen fit to explain his position, and in doing so, does not better matters much. He says: "What I said was substantially this: That whilst this war was prosecuted for the putting down of rebellion, and the 'maintenance of the Constitution as it is and the Union as it was,' the Democracy would freely shed their blood, and liberally give their money, but so soon as it ceased to be a war for the suppression of rebellion, and became an Abolition war, no Democrat would be found willing to volunteer. I further remarked that the Government in all probability would make a draft for soldiers, and that that drafting would be in the hands of Republicans; that the party would want to keep Republicans at home to vote, and want to send Democrats away so that they could not vote, and that no fair draft would be made; and that if any Democrat believed that he had been fraudulently drafted, he would refuse to go, and that then a file of soldiers would be sent after him, and that under such circumstances he would resist, even at the point of the bayonet, and that in this way civil war would be brought upon us in Ohio. Not one word was said as advising resistance, but all was told as a vision of what would be future events. Now, Mr. Editor, let me repeat, as a warning to the Republicans, that no unfair or fraudulent drafting will be submitted to. A word to the wise should be sufficient."

—Brigade Surgeon and Medical Director, U. S. A., J. E. Quidor, has invented an instantaneous bullet extractor. It consists essentially of a metallic cylinder, closed at one end; to the other of which is attached a bell-shaped india-rubber mouth-piece, or sucker. Within this cylinder is a tube containing metallic mercury, with a valve at its lower extremity. To the upper extremity of the cylinder is attached an exhauster or air-pump. In using the instrument the mouth-piece is applied over the orifice of the wound, the tube projecting a short distance within it, and the air exhausted. If the ball is simply imbedded in the soft structure, the expansion of the air beneath the ball, which is just in proportion to the power of exhaustion above, expels it from the wound. Should the ball be imbedded in a bone or retained beneath the tendons, the valve is opened and a column of mercury precipitated into the wound, which, by its specific gravity, added to the atmospheric pressure above, forces the ball from its position and floats it from the wound.

—Col. Van Wyck writes from the headquarters of the Fifty-sixth Regiment, under date of Harrison's Landing, July 26: "I felt keenly the censure of our division contained in Gen. McClellan's dispatch, principally from the grief I knew for a few days it would occasion in the breasts of thousands of friends at home—at least until the facts were fully known. Here we had the consciousness of duty well performed. I remarked to Gen. Naglee that we could bide our time, for time and Providence make all things even. Now we are already sustained in the official reports of Naglee, Casey and Keyes, our Brigade, Division and Corps Commanders. We are further sustained in the additional fact, now passed into history, that the left wing withstood the shock which the right wing could not resist."

—As a specimen of finished abuse, Parson Brownlow's notice of John Slidell, in a speech at Utica, was an unapproachable thing in its line. "Perhaps," he said, "some of you men with gray hairs, among my hearers, have visited Washington, and have seen John Slidell; if you have, you have seen an exact counterpart of a full-grown ourang outang. When God Almighty placed the head on his shoulders, He did it with the expectation that nobody would mistake him for an honest man." The Parson characterized him further as the "butt cut of original sin, and the upper-crust of nastiness," and said he would not insult the memory of Judas Iscariot by comparing him with the modern traitor.

—A patriotic Shaker, Samuel Cross by name, from the settlement near Warrensville, Ohio, recently presented himself at a recruiting office in Cleveland, and desired to enroll his name. The physician examined him, and declared him incapable of performing military duty. Mr. Cross, however, declared that he would go to the war as a nurse, if he could not be accepted as a soldier. The indomitable spirit which he displayed conquered the scruples of the physician, and he consented to have him enrolled. On receiving his certificate entitling him to $50 bounty, he at once transferred it to a disabled soldier whom he chanced to meet. Such patriotism and liberality speak for themselves.

—A correspondent of the Boston Transcript writes from Washington: "Mr. Lincoln declared to Ex-Gov. Dennison, of Ohio, on Saturday, that he wanted those persons who had complained of him to know that he now leaves everything of a military nature in the hands of his leading General. 'I found I must select one man,' said the President, 'to command all the armies of the United States, and though it may be possible that Halleck is not a great General, I firmly believe he is the best I have got.' He stated further, in the course of his conversation, that Mr. Stanton had no more to do with military movements than a clerk. He is like a Secretary of War in time of peace—he attends to all the duties of his office, but does not plan a campaign anywhere."

—The charge that Hon. Garrett Davis opposed the promotion of Brig.-Gen. Rousseau to a Major-Generalship is exploded. In a card explicitly denying the rumor, Mr. Davis says: "I am a true personal and political friend of Gen. Rousseau, and there is no man in our State whose promotion I would have sought to his prejudice. I believe this charge is equally false in regard to the other gentlemen implicated. It is a rule with me to notice no anonymous newspaper falsehoods charged against me; nor would I now depart from it, but for my high personal regard for Gen. Rousseau, and that his mind should be disabused if he should meet with the falsehood of which this note is the correction."

—The following persons were discharged from the Military Prison in Louisville, on Friday, upon taking the oath of allegiance and giving the amount of bond annexed to the names: H. H. Maddox, $10,000; T. H. Shanks, $10,000; J. D. Ross, $5,000; Moses Lane, $5,000; Wm. P. McCormick, $5,000; C. M. Lellard, $5,000; A. B. Wash, $5,000; John A. Mayor, oath; Joseph Hamilton, $2,000; Charles Feigu, $1,000; Peter Jett, $5,000; J. J. Wilson, $2,000. Julius Carpenter and Andrew Sornle were unconditionally discharged, and John Ward and Daniel Crow were released upon taking the oath.

—On Monday Mr. John W. Selby, of the firm of Isaac, Brother & Co., of Baltimore, returned to that city from Richmond, whither he went just before the breaking out of the war. Sergeant Cook, as soon as Mr. Selby's arrival was announced, waited upon and escorted him to the office of the United States Marshal, where the prisoner demonstrated that by going to Virginia he was enabled to recover to Northern merchants the payment of about $150,000, which otherwise they probably would not have got. After a short detention, Mr. S. was discharged, and a detective sent to accompany him to his home.

—While Morgan's men were pillaging Versailles, Ky., a good sister of the Christian Church and a most devoted Union lady, gave them a lecture upon the evils of secesh, the fate of rebels, thieves, and robbers, which must have made a deep impression upon their callous hearts. She opened the good book and took the text "The way of the transgressor is hard," which she enforced with a power and eloquence seldom equalled, and then offered them a Bible, which was of course declined, as what she had said was sufficient without being backed by holy writ.

—The United States authorities in Newark, N. J., have seized a silver cup which had been sent to an engraver in that city to be marked as follows:

"STONEWALL JACKSON.
1862."

It is not known whether it is intended for some Lodge or League, or whether it is a present for some child in "Dixie"—the latter is probably the case. The subject is, however, under investigation by the proper authorities.

—The American Watchman, a German newspaper of Newark, N. J., was recently returned from the Thornville (Ohio) Post-office, with the Postmaster's announcement that he would not deliver the Abolition sheet. The editor wrote to John A. Kasson, Postmaster-General, who returned the following answer: "SIR: For reply to your letter of the 28th inst., you are hereby informed that, on the receipt of your letter, the Postmaster at Thornville, Perry County, Ohio, was promptly removed from office, and another appointed in his stead."

—Capt. McMichael, of Philadelphia, one of Gen. Grant's Staff officers, who was taken prisoner in the battle of Shiloh, exchanged and recaptured within three or four days after he had been set at liberty, has again succeeded in securing his freedom. He was released at Tupelo and made his way to St. Louis, where he now is, via Corinth. He says the rebels are massing troops at Chattanooga, to overwhelm Buell's corps. Bragg is in command of the rebel forces.

—R. R. Ross and two supposed accomplices have been arrested in Louisville and committed to the military prison, for attempting to send South a number of articles designed for the use of the redoubtable Morgan. There was, among other things, a complete outfit for a cavalryman, including a splendid uniform, a pair of pistols, a sword, a saddle, bridle, blanket, &c., and, in short, all the articles necessary to the full equipment of a rebel cavalry officer.

—Rev. Hiram Eddy, of Winsted, Conn., who has just been released after a year's captivity in the South, was received with public demonstrations of rejoicing on his arrival home. In his speech he said: "I am for the Union ten thousand times more than ever before; my hairs have whitened during the year of my captivity, but for every white hair I have scored a black mark against this rebellion."

—Boylston, Mass., offered $105 to each volunteer who enlisted before Aug. 5, and Mr. John B. Gough, who resides there, generously adds to this $10 bounty to each unmarried recruit and $20 to each one with a family, and $10 to the family of each soldier from Boylston now in the field; and still more, Mr. Gough declares that he will devote to his country and to liberty nine-tenths of his income, until the war is ended.

—Rev. J. A. Anderson, Chaplain of the Third Regiment California Volunteers, was decidedly on the rampage on the Fourth of July! At the close of the oration at the Agricultural Hall, in San Francisco, he pronounced the following strange benediction: "And now may the God of Washington, the God of Foote, Halleck, McClellan and Lincoln, nerve, guide and surge this whole nation till Richmond is taken, Charleston burnt, secession annihilated, and slop-shop Union men turned out of existence. Amen."

—A resident of Machias, Me., who has made himself conspicuous by the offensive exhibition of his sympathies with the rebels, has grown old pretty rapidly during the last eight years. In 1854 he was a member of the State Legislature, and then, according to his own statement, he was twenty-nine years old. On the enlistment roll of his town his age is given at forty-five years and nine months.

—The President of the Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Wheeling Railroad Company, Mr. J. N. McCullough, has given permission to one of the engineers, who has been in the employ of that organization for eight years, to raise a company of volunteers for the war, the situations of all the men to be reserved. Besides this, Mr. McCullough has given the sum of $500 bounty money to the proposed company.

—Mr. Horace Browning, a farmer of Lebanon, Conn., drove into Willimantic Sunday morning with a load of produce for sale, under the impression that it was Saturday, and would not be convinced that it was Sunday until he made inquiries of persons going to church. He then turned about, and his horse made pretty good time homeward.

—Aaron Beebe, of the Tenth Connecticut Volunteers, advertises in the New-London (Conn.) Chronicle that: "Whereas, Mr. Andrew Peabody has taken my wife, Calista M. Beebe, since I came for a soldier, I respectfully request him, or some one else, to take care of her, as I forbid anyone harboring or trusting her on my account after this date."

—Mrs. Mitchell, daughter of Gen. Leslie Coombs, was arrested at Lexington, Ky., on Thursday, by order of the military authorities, charged with having papers and letters in her possession, conveying information to the rebels. She was searched, but no papers were found upon her person.

—Some of the most pertinacious rebels in Norfolk—those who have three or four children—are attempting to annov Gen. VRELE by arraying their young hopefuls in the colors of the rebel emblem. One wears the red and another the white, and thus they parade the streets in couplets or triplets.

—On the 30th ult. a party of three arrived in Fairmount, Va., from Richmond, having escaped by way of Staunton and Harrisonburgh, down the valley, and from thence across the mountains. The names of the refugees are Waitman T. Mathers and wife, and L. A. Williams.

—A London correspondent of the Chicago Journal writes: "I have just learned that a decoration from the King of Sweden goes by the present steamer to Capt. Ericsson, in testimony of his success in constructing the Monitor. The decoration consists of the 'Order of the Northern Star,' the brightest in Sweden."

—At Baldwinsville, Onondaga County, on Monday, the volunteers seized a rich old secessionist named Tappan, who declared that he hoped Jeff. Davis would get them all, and tweaked his nose, pulled his hair, and pummeled him until he begged for mercy.

—A Peekskill merchant, who hastily accused a lady customer of having stolen some change which he missed, and obliged her to submit to a search before he would believe her protestations of innocence, received a cowhiding from the injured person, a few days since.

—Gray hair-dye--not that designed to conceal this color, but that warranted to produce it—has suddenly become very popular among the rebel sympathizers in Baltimore, who are afraid "to stand in the draft," and a barber who sells it is said to be making money rapidly.

—A young woman, named Sarah Taylor, 18 years of age, does duty in the First Tennessee Union Regiment. She is an adept at the sword exercise, and a sure shot with the pistol. She wears a blue chapeau, and carries the regulation sword and a pair of silver-mounted pistols. The men call her Capt. Taylor.

—Mr. Christopher Armstrong, a Philadelphian, who has been an active church-member and heretofore borne a good character, was before the United States Commissioner on Tuesday, to answer a charge of having been concerned in the forgery of land warrants. He was held to bail in the sum of $3,000.

—Maj. Duncan, who has distinguished himself by his gallantry in the battles fought in New-Mexico during the last few months, passed through St. Louis on Monday, en route for Washington. He fought bravely in the battle of Valverde, and is now suffering from a severe wound in the head, which he received in a skirmish at Albuqurque.

—Col. J. L. Wilson, of the Thirty-fourth Indiana Volunteers, publishes a card thanking Gov. Morton for reinstating him in the command of his regiment, from which he was removed, as he claims, simply because he criticised Gen. Buell's movements in Kentucky as dilatory.

—There are thirty-one rebel prisoners who have been tried by military commission at Jefferson City, Mo., and await official promulgation of sentence by the President or the Commander of the Western Department.

—Ex-Senator George E. Pugh recently made a speech at a war meeting at Dayton, Ohio, in which he said that, at the first whisper of compromise from our Southern brethren, he was for a settlement of this difficulty and forgetting the past.

—It is rumored that Gen. Scott has been solicited by the Government to give the benefits of his experience occasionally at the new camp of instruction, near Philadelphia. The General is now at West Point.

—Mr. Gideon S. Holmes, a native of this country, once a resident of Boston, and formerly United States Consul at the Cape of Good Hope, recently sent $500 to a gentleman of Boston, to be used for the benefit of families of soldiers who have gone to the war.

—Some volunteers to whom one Sam. Crow, of Oquawka, Illinois, talked treason, punished him by taking the responsibility of administering twenty-nine lashes. Subsequently he was obliged to take the oath of allegiance before a Justice of the Peace.

—Bellows Falls has become too hot as a place of residence for the Editor of the Argus, who has made himself particularly offensive by his free exhibition of sympathy with the rebellion. His course was most heartily denounced at a public meeting held in that town on Aug. 4.

—At the war meeting at Brockport, a few evenings since, Ex-Gov. Church expostulated with the young men for not coming forward, and said, after a pause in the proceedings, "Why, I could raise more men from the ladies in the house!"

—A schoolmistress at Pilgrim's Corner, in Orange County, is said to have been dismissed a few days ago, because she refused to join in the rejoicings of the family with which she was staying over the reported death of Col. Van Wyck.

—Jesse D. Bright, Ex-Senator, is busy about some scheme or other. The Cincinnati papers note the fact as remarkable that he has visited that city twice within a fortnight.

—The Franklin Literary Society of the Presbyterian College at Canonsburgh, Penn., where Vallandigham graduated, has recently expelled him by a unanimous vote.

—One Wm. Faherty, who has been serving in the rebel army, was arrested in Washington on Tuesday. He refused to take the oath of allegiance, and was committed to prison as a spy.

—Brig.-Gen. Slocum, who entered the service as Colonel of the Twenty-seventh New-York Regiment, has been commissioned Major-General of Volunteers.

—Lieut.-Col. O'Kane, of the rebel army, who has had the impudence to attemppt recruiting at Independence, Mo., has been arrested and taken to St. Louis.

—Mr. Upson, of the Somerset County (N. J.) News, was severely cowhided, on July 31, by one Andrew M. Tunison, whom he had denounced as a Secessionist.

—Joseph Batteil, Esq., of this City, has made a donation of $5,000 to Yale College, to promote the study of sacred music in that institution.

—Miles, an occasional correspondent of this paper from McClellan's army, is, we regret to say, a prisoner in Richmond.

—Maj.-Gen. W. B. Franklin has been spending a few days at Cape May with his wife. He passed through Philadelphia en route to Washington and the James River.

—Brig.-Gen. George G. Meade, who was severely wounded in one of the late battles before Richmond, is fast recovering, and will probably soon be able to resume his command. He is with his friends in Philadelphia at present.

—Gov. Curtin, of Pennsylvania, has returned to Harrisburgh from Bedford Springs, whither he had been compelled to go for a few days to seek rest from his arduous labors.

—Brig.-Gen. Garfield, who won his stars by giving Humphrey Marshall a drubbing, is at his home in Portage County, Ohio, on a short leave of absence.

—Mr. Zenas T. Haines, who has had much experience as a member of the Press of Boston, has taken editorial charge of the Worcester Transcript.

—Gen. Wadsworth, Military Governor of Washington, made a sudden trip to Harrisburgh on Tuesday evening, to confer with Gov. Curtin on Government business.

—Mr. Maitland, of the Montreal Transcript, is enlightening the Canucks on the state of affairs in the Southern States, where he spent some time just after the outbreak of the rebellion.

— Prof. Patterson, of Dartmouth College, is named as the probable candidate for Congress in the Third New-Hampshire District.

—Ex-Mayor Barker, of Pittsburgh, Penn., was run over on the Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad on Saturday last and instantly killed.

—Brig.-Gen. Couch was in Taunton, Mass., with his family, on Monday.

—Mrs. Gen. Franz Sigel and Mrs. Gen. Carl Schurz are staying in Philadelphia.

—Jeff. Davis' coachman, W. A. Jackson, is lecturing in Hartford, Conn.

—Brig.-Gen. I. B. Richardson has been commissioned Major-General of Volunteers.

—Gov. Ramsey, of Minnesota, is visiting his friends and relatives in Harrisburgh, Penn.

—Hon. John A. Kasson, First Assistant Postmaster-General, was in Wheeling, Va., on Tuesday.

—Lieut. Worden with his wife were in Albany on Tuesday.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Attempt to Arrest Major-Gen. Fremont for Contempt of Court.

UNITED STATES SERVICE EXEMPTS FROM ARREST UNDER CIVIL PROCESS.

In the Supreme Court, at Chambers, before Justice BARNARD, A. A. SELOVER and Gen. JOHN C. FREMONT were sued by JOHN S. GILES, as the maker and indorser of a promissory note for $2,000, in which judgment resulted against them for that amount with costs. Execution being issued and returned by the Sheriff unsatisfied, plaintiff's attorney obtained an order for examining defendants on supplementary proceedings, returnable Aug. 7. Gen. FREMONT failing to appear and submit to an examination, the attorney for plaintiff, yesterday, applied for an order to arrest the General for contempt of Court.

The defendants' counsel opposed the application, on the ground that, being in the service of the United States, Gen. FREMONT was exempt from arrest.

The plaintiff's counsel contended that Major-Gen. FREMONT was not now in the service of the United States, having retired from his command in Virginia; and that the act of Congress exempting from arrest those in the United States service, applied only to parties in actual service.

Justice BARNARD remarked that he thought the plaintiff's counsel wrong in his views, but would give him time to put in authorities, and render a decision on the third Monday of August.

Interesting Occasion at the Abbot Institute.

On Thursday morning, at the Abbot Collegiate Institute, it was our privilege to witness and participate in a most interesting occasion, in which the principals were the distinguished proprietor of the Institute, one of his most estimable scholars, and him with whom she had elected to travel through this vale of joy or woe, as the future may determine.

Beneath the cheerful folds of our National ensign, and surrounded by the bright faces of hopeful friends, the young couple pledged their mutual vows, while, in the presence of loving witnesses, the learned Doctor pronounced them man and wife, and begged the blessing of Divine Providence upon them.

After the ceremony and the enjoyments of the social circle about the well-spread board, and the thousand and one leave-takings of the younger ladies, the bridal couple, attended by a gay party of chosen friends, left forever the surroundings of the academic life, and entered upon the broader ocean of experience, viâ the Fall River Line and Newport.

Commissioners of Charities and Correction.

There was no meeting of this Board yesterday.

The weekly statement of the Commission is as follows:

Remaining, July 26	6,776
Admitted since	2,191
Total	8,967

Of whom 38 have died since the last report, 1,772 were discharged and 364 sent to Blackwell's Island. At the date of August 2, there were 6,793 under the charge of the Commissioners, of whom 449 were at Bellevue Hospital, 767 at Lunatic Asylum, 1,452 at Almshouse, 527 at Penitentiary, 974 at Workhouse, 11 in Small Pox Hospital, 828 on Randall's Island, 194 at Randall's Island Hospital, 240 in City Prison, 25 in Second District Prison, 26 in Third District Prison, in Fourth District Prison, 751 in Island Hospital, 282 at Colored Home, 180 at Colored Orphan Asylum, 32 children at nurse and 52 at the City Cemetery. In addition to the above, there are 483 sick and wounded soldiers in Bellevue Hospital.

The Croton Aqueduct Board.

By a unanimous decision of the above Department, it has been determined to let on the water into the new Grand Reservoir, in Central Park, on Tuesday, Aug. 19, at 3 P. M. The public will be invited to be present, and will be regaled with a spectacle worthy of the attention of every citizen. Owing to the hesitation of the Common Council to pass an appropriation to defray the expenses of the celebration, it will not be as magnificent an affair as it should be, and as our citizens have a right to expect; but all that the Board can do will be done, to give the people a full view of the splendid arrangements completed for their benefit.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

FATAL RESULT OF A STAB—ESCAPE OF THE PERPETRATOR.—JOHN MAGNIN, the man who was stabbed late on Monday night last, during a fight which took place at the corner of Catharine and Cherry streets, died in the New-York Hospital, yesterday afternoon. The friends of deceased allege that, seeing an altercation on the corner, he ran to quell it, or otherwise interfered, when some man at present unknown, stabbed him in the pit of the stomach with a knife, and ran away. A sailor's boarding-house runner, well known in Water-street, is strongly suspected as being the assailant, and the Fourth Ward Police are in search of him. Coroner COLIN was notified, and will hold an inquest on the body to-day. Deceased was a single man, about 40 years of age. He lived within a few doors of where his death-blow was received.

GENERAL SESSIONS.—CATHARINE WATERS, indicted for grand larceny, in stealing a dress and various other articles of costume from one HENRY HORTEN, No. 69 Mercer-street, was tried and acquitted. WILLIAM MASON was tried and convicted of burglary in third degree, and sentenced to State prison for five years. MARY E. IVINS was tried on an indictment for abducting a female child, SARAH LEE, aged 3 years, while playing in the yard of No. 543 Broome-street, and acquitted. WILLIAM THOMPSON, alias TILMAN, pleaded guilty to an indictment for grand larceny, and JOHN TIGHE pleaded guilty to an indictment for petit larceny. TIGHE was sent to the Juvenile Asylum, and THOMPSON remanded for sentence.

GOVERNMENT SALE OF PRIZE RIFLES POSTPONED.—The sale of 4,000 Enfield rifles, captured from the prize steamer Nassau, which was advertised to take place yesterday, was postponed by order of the War Department. It is supposed that the Government intends to reserve them for its own use. The rifles were manufactured in London, and are of superior quality. Most of them were in a very rusty condition when captured, having got wet on the voyage from England, but they have all been put in perfect order by BLUNT & SIMMS, gunmakers, at considerable expense to the Government, and in view of the present necessities of the War Department, their sale at auction would have been a poor stroke of economy.

A MERCHANT CHARGED WITH PERJURY.—Mr. ABRAHAM MESSEROLE, a merchant 67 years of age, was arrested yesterday by Officer DEGRUSH, of the Essex Market Police Court, on a warrant issued by Justice OSBORN. The defendant stands charged, on the oath of LEWIS UHL, Esq., No. 76 Wall-street, with having testified falsely in a matter which was pending before a Referee, and in which a large amount of property is involved. It is charged that the alleged false testimony of the accused was material to the issue of the cause. Mr. MESSEROLE was required to find bail in $2,000 to answer the charge before the Court of Sessions. The complaint has been transmitted to the Grand Jury for their action.

THE LATE ROW IN A HOOK AND LADDER HOUSE.—We are requested by the Hook and Ladder Company No. 12 to correct a paragraph in our issue of Tuesday, in regard to an affray in which a negro employed by Hook and Ladder Company No. 29 came to grief. The negro is represented as being quarrelsome, and as having challenged fight when he was ordered out of the Hook and Ladder house. He at once drew a hydrant wrench, and attacked the boys, when they seized and expelled him. In the course of the fracas he was struck by his own weapon, causing an effusion of blood. No blame for the accident can properly be attached to No. 12.

I. O. OF O. F.—ELECTION OF OFFICERS OF THE GRAND LODGE.—The annual election of officers of the Grand Lodge of Odd-Fellows for the Southern District of New-York, took place yesterday afternoon, at Odd-Fellows' Hall, and resulted as follows: Grand Master, D. G. M. EDWIN SWANTON, of Lodge No. 50; Deputy Grand Master, G. W. AARON MCCALL, of No. 140; Grand Warden, H. SNYDER, of No. 404; Grand Secretary, JOHN J. DAVIES, of No. 1; Grand Treasurer, JACOB RUSSELL, of No. 28; Grand Representative, P. G. M. GEO. SMITH, of No. 30.

SOLDIERS DIED.—The following list of soldiers, who have died at the Bellevue Hospital during the past week, is reported by Mr. JOHN WHITE, the Warden:

Orland E. Terro, Co. I, 83d Penn. Vol.
Geo. H. Gallup, Co. B, 34th N. Y. Vol.
J. H. Sanborn, Co. K, 5th N. H. Vol.
Wallace Bogart, Co. A, 42d N. Y. Vol.
Henry Augustus Ryer, Co. I, 1st Penn. Vol.

Their bodies were handed over to the Government Undertaker for interment in Cypress Hills Cemetery.

ACCIDENTAL DROWNING.—Late on Wednesday afternoon, WILLIAM DANGLEY, a boy 6 years of age, fell into the dock at Pier No. 31 East River, from which he was soon rescued in a state of insensibility, and conveyed to a drug store at the corner of Monroe and Market streets. All efforts to restore him proved unavailing, and death ensued soon afterward. His remains were subsequently conveyed to his late home, No. 118 Madison-street, where Coroner WILDEY held an inquest.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—The monthly meeting of the Chamber was held yesterday, at 1 P. M. The customary routine business was transacted, and the following gentlemen elected members of the Chamber: Hunn C. Beach, Robert H. Berdell, Henry Wm. Smith, Richard D. Lathrop, Dudley P. Ely, Jasper and T. Van Vleck, Horatio Dorr. No further business presenting itself, the Chamber adjourned.

WAR MEETING ON SUNDAY.—The Christian Alliance propose to have a grand War Meeting on Sunday night, at 7½ o'clock, at the City Assembly Rooms. Prominent speakers, whose names will be duly advertised, will address the meeting, and it will be the endeavor of the Alliance to get up a religious enthusiasm among the people in favor of an earnest prosecution of absolute war.

THE NEW RESERVOIR.—Tired, doubtless, of the inaction of the City Government, the Croton Water Board have determined to turn the water into the new grand reservoir at Central Park on Tuesday, the 19th, at 3 o'clock, P. M. There will not be a grand time, as was anticipated, because the Council has not seen fit to make an appropriation for that purpose.

HATCHWAY CASUALTY.—PATRICK WELSH, an Irish laborer, fell through the hatchway from the third story of the bonded warehouse, No. 274 South-street, to the ground floor, and was dangerously injured. He was taken up, and conveyed to Bellevue Hospital. WELSH lives at No. 326 East Thirteenth-street.

FATAL FALL.—A woman named MARY GALLAGHER fell from the roof of the five-story building, No. 170 East Seventeenth-street to the pavement, on Wednesday afternoon, and was so terribly injured that she died in Bellevue Hospital soon afterward. An inquest was held by Coroner RANNEY.

THE PARK BARRACKS.—Gov. MORGAN visited the Park Barracks, yesterday morning, in company with Capt. ABELL. The convalescents held a meeting on Wednesday, and passed complimentary resolutions concerning the treatment they have received while under the charge of that institution.

DEPARTURE OF THE EDINBURGH.—The steamship Edinburgh sailed at 5 A. M., yesterday, with fifteen cabin and eighty-five steerage passengers. She was prevented from sailing on Wednesday by the storm of Tuesday night.

MOVEMENTS OF GEN. FREMONT.—Maj.-Gen. FREMONT and family left the City, where they have been since his relief from command, yesterday afternoon, for the sea-side, where they will remain for a short time.

HONORS TO A NEW-YORKER.—Dartmouth College has conferred the honorary degree of Master of Arts on RUFUS F. ANDREWS, Esq., Surveyor of the port of New-York.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

A NEW METRE.—An ingenious individual has invented a new water metre, which has been satisfactorily tested by the authorities of Brooklyn, and is approved by the Water Commissioners of that city. The metre is readily attached to the service pipe, occupying but a trifling additional space, and may be placed in any position required. The peculiar advantages claimed in this invention are simplicity of construction and action, perfect accuracy in measurement, having no close compartments, it is self-cleaning, will not become foul, or get out of order, the sediment of the water not being retained, as in other metres of water-tight compartments. Also in affecting a great reduction of the expense, being furnished at about half the cost of any other metre now in use, and the friction being reduced to the smallest possible extent, the wear of the metre to one point or axle, which can be replaced at trifling cost. The metre was tested in every manner with the most satisfactory results to the gentlemen present, and was found to work with unerring accuracy under all circumstances.

ANOTHER.—The Trustees of the Long Island College Hospital seem to be peculiarly unfortunate in the character of their volunteer watchers. Some days ago, a watcher was arrested for taking a $5 bill from an invalid soldier and forgetting to return it. Yesterday, an Englishman, named JOHN RICHARDSON, who had been acting as a volunteer watcher, was arrested by Officer OSWALD, of the Forty-third Precinct, for stealing shirts, drawers, and other articles belonging to soldiers. He was arrested as he was leaving the premises, and the articles were found upon him.

GOING SOUTH.—Rev. WM. HODGES, the colored pastor who for years has been engaged in educating the people of his own race in this City, will soon leave for the South, and intends to locate himself at Norfolk, Va., where he formerly resided. He has property there, and intends to devote the rest of his days to preparing the negroes of Norfolk for a life of freedom.

THE BEEKMAN-STREET FIRE.—Dr. RICHARD FISHER, of De Kalb-avenue, is supposed to have lost his life at the recent fire in Beekman-street. He left home Tuesday morning last, and has not been seen since. As he was a constant visitor at the Rainbow Hotel, it is supposed he was there at the time of the fire.

ACCIDENT.—A mason named JAMES DAILY, yesterday afternoon, while at work on a house in Bedford-avenue, fell from the second-story to the sidewalk and was seriously injured. He was taken to his residence in Classon-avenue, near Van Buren-street, by Sergeant JOHNSON, of the Forty-ninth Precinct Police.

DEATH BY DROWNING.—Mr. TRUMAN BROWN, of Brooklyn, lost his son, a fine young man, aged 19 years, last week, by drowning. He was bathing in a stream at New-Canaan, Conn., and was suddenly cramped and lost.

BODY FOUND.—The body of an unknown man—entirely nude—was found in the water at the foot of Degraw-street, yesterday morning. Deceased was about 35 years of age, medium height, and had red hair.

MILITARY.—Recruiting has been very brisk in this city during the present week, and a resort to a draft will not be necessary.

NEW-JERSEY.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES IN THE JERSEY CITY ALMSHOUSE.—The question of dividing the religious services in the Jersey City Almshouse under two distinct forms—Protestant and Catholic—which is brought before each succeeding Common Council, was again revived at the meeting of the Board on Tuesday evening. Alderman KANE offered a resolution directing that the same privileges be granted to Catholic ladies to teach children in the Almshouse as are extended to ladies of other denominations. Considerable discussion ensued, when the whole matter was laid over for future consideration. The object of this resolution is to divide the children into two classes, those of Catholic parentage to be taught exclusively by Catholic teachers, and those of Protestant birth to be taught by Protestants, instead of being taught together alternately by Protestants and Catholics, as at present.

A BARN DESTROYED BY LIGHTNING.—During the heavy shower on Tuesday evening, a barn situated near the Latourette Hotel, Bergen Point, owned by the New-Jersey Central Railroad Company, and occupied by Mr. SIMEON MEELICK, was struck by lightning and entirely consumed. About thirty tons of hay was in the building, which, together with other stock, was destroyed. The house of Mr. MEELICK, a short distance from the barn, was also struck and badly damaged. None of the inmates were injured.

CITY FINANCES.—The report of the City Treasurer of Jersey City shows the condition of the City Finances to be as follows:

Balance in Treasury July 1, 1862	$5,357 67
Receipts in July	29,329 67
Total	$34,687 34
Payments in July	28,801 84
Balance in Treasury Aug. 1	$5,885 50

RECORDER'S REPORT.—Recorder MARTINDALE, of Jersey City, reports that there have been 372 persons arrested during the quarter ending July 31, by the police, who were disposed of by him as follows: Discharged, 187; committed to jail and workhouse, 45; committed to jail for trial, 12; sent to the City Prison, 46; held to bail, 56; sent to Almshouse, 2; fined $2, 16; fined $3 50, 1; fined $10, 3; fined $20, 1.

REPORT OF THE CHIEF OF POLICE.—From the report of Chief of Police RIELY, of Jersey City, presented to the Common Council on Tuesday evening, we learn that, during the quarter ending July 31, the total number of persons arrested was 385—263 males, and 122 females. The number of persons furnished with lodgings during the quarter was 773, of whom 674 were males, and 199 females. The Chief urges the organization of a detective force to attend the railroad depôts and other public places.

DEATH IN THE SOLDIERS' HOSPITAL.—JOHN HAMIESTER, a member of Co. I, Third Regiment N. J. V., died yesterday in the Soldiers' Hospital in Jersey City of consumption. Deceased arrived at the hospital on the 25th of June. His remains were forwarded to Buffalo. This is only the fifth death that has occurred in this hospital since its opening, out of 448 patients treated.

STATE BOUNTY.—An additional appropriation of $2,000 has been made by the Common Council of Jersey City, for the payment of the State bounty to the families of volunteers, the former appropriation being exhausted. This money is advanced, to be refunded by the State.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Our advices from the Army of the Potomac are again important this morning. We have a dispatch dated yesterday, and a letter from our special correspondent dated the day before, giving details of the expedition to Malvern Hill, with the announcement that it is the intention of Gen. MCCLELLAN to hold that position. The General proceeded there on Tuesday afternoon, and remained through the night, and COUCH'S Division was sent up to reinforce HOOKER, who had already a considerable force there. It was rumored also that another division was to be sent up on Wednesday morning—a proceeding probably rendered necessary by the movement of a considerable rebel force from Richmond, with the intention of recapturing their lost position. That they entertain such an intention is believed from the reports of deserters and contrabands, who reached headquarters on Wednesday night. At Malvern Hill, however, our forces can have the cooperation of Commodore WILKES' gunboats, the acquaintance of which the rebels will not care about renewing at short range. Three thousand of our men, exchanged prisoners, arrived from Richmond on Wednesday afternoon. Those fit to do duty were immediately sent to their regiments.

There is no later intelligence from Gen. POPE'S army. We have, however, important letters from our special correspondent, giving details of recent movements, including the capture of Orange Court-house, a short distance from Gordonsville.

A brief dispatch is sent to us from Cincinnati, announcing that Gen. ROBERT MCCOOK has been murdered while riding in his ambulance, in advance of his brigade. He was assassinated by guerrillas.

Two new regiments are to leave Massachusetts for the seat of war on Monday and Tuesday next—the Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth. Both have full ranks, and are splendidly equipped.

Official documents just published show that Gen. NEGLEY'S orders from Gen. MITCHEL, when he advanced on Chattanooga, Tenn., were to threaten the rebel Gen. ADAMS, and draw SMITH into the place, so that the force at Cumberland Gap might be weakened, and that MORGAN might then be enabled to occupy the place. In this Gen. NEGLEY was completely successful.

Gov. SALOMON, of Wisconsin, has issued a proclamation, establishing a uniform bounty of fifty dollars to each new recruit under the recent call for three hundred thousand volunteers. The sum to be raised is $450,000, which is equally apportioned to each county in the State, on the basis of last year's tax assessment.

An intercepted letter written to his brother by the redoubtable Gen. PILLOW, expresses great anxiety regarding the fate of the negroes. He fears that the South, in achieving its independence will lose one thousand million dollars worth of slaves, and advises crowding the negroes into the South with the greatest expedition. He also urges his brother to do all he can to make the negroes believe that all of them who fall into Federal hands will be sent to Cuba.

GENERAL NEWS.

Telegrams received in this City yesterday announced the loss of the steamer Golden Gate, which left San Francisco on the 21st of July for Panama, with 230 passengers, $1,114,000 in treasure for this City, and $270,000 for England. She was burnt at sea, near Manzanillo, on the coast of Mexico, on the 27th of July, and one hundred and eighty of her passengers and twenty of her crew lost. There appears to be some doubt about the loss of the treasure, as some of the dispatches received express the belief that it might be saved—the ship being beached. Full particulars are delayed by an interruption of telegraphic communication.

A telegram was received in Albany on Wednesday, announcing the death of Col. MCLEOD MURPHY, of the Engineer Regiment, Ex-State Senator. No confirmation of the report has been received.

The Detroit papers publish, by order of Gen. BRANNER, lists of absentees from the Second and Third Cavalry, and the Tenth and Fourteenth Infantry Regiments, and the Third Battery. These lists embrace nearly 1,000 names.

The prize brig Napier, of Yarmouth, N. S., 150 tons register, arrived at Philadelphia on Wednesday in charge of Prizemaster GRESTON, of the United States steamer Mount Vernon, by which vessel she was captured on the 29th ult., off Wilmington, N. C. She has a cargo of salt, which was obtained at Turk's Island, and when captured was attempting to run into a Southern port. The papers of the brig were placed in the hands of Prize Commissioner FLANDERS, and the vessel was surrendered to the Marshal.

The cargo of the prize steamer Florida, which was captured in St. Andrew's Bay, Florida, early in April, has just been discharged at Queen-street wharf, Philadelphia. It consists of 200 bales of cotton, which, at the price cotton is now selling, will bring a handsome sum. The cotton is to be stored until an order of sale is made. The questions touching the disposition of the vessel are still before the Court, though three months have elapsed since she arrived at Philadelphia. It is said that the difficulty in the way of a decision is a claim made by parties North who had a share in the vessel before her capture or confiscation by the rebels.

The machinery of the sloop-of-war Juniata, which has been building for some months at Philadelphia, is so far completed that steam will be raised at the close of the present week. With the machinery in such a state of forwardness there is nothing to delay the speedy completion of the vessel.

REANY, SON & Co., at Chester, Penn., have received a contract from the Government for the construction of an iron gunboat, which is intended more particularly for service in rivers. She will be 236 feet long, 35 feet beam, and 12 feet depth of hold, and will be a side-wheel steamer, with a rudder at each end, similar to the Miami, which was built at the Philadelphia Navy-yard. The same firm have also contracted to build a set of engines for an iron-clad vessel under construction in this City.

One of the iron gun-carriages for the New Ironsides has been sent to Philadelphia, from the Phœnix Iron Works at Trenton, N. J., and the other seven, which are in course of construction there, will be completed by Tuesday. These carriages weigh between seven and eight thousand pounds each, and are to have mounted upon them eleven-inch Dahlgren guns, which weigh 15,000 pounds.

The entire number of sick in hospital at Harrison's Landing, on Aug. 4, was 881.

The receipts of the American Board of Missions for May and June, 1862, fell $17,000 short of those for the corresponding months of 1861, and a note from Rev. S. B. TREAT, the Home Secretary, states that the deficiency for July is still greater. Last year the contributions amounted to $50,000, and this year they do not reach half that total.

A terrible storm of wind and rain, thunder and lightning visited Chicago and vicinity on Monday last. Trees were stripped of limbs and leaves, chimneys were toppled over and roofs torn off, and one man lost his life in consequence of a severe blow which he received upon his head from a falling timber.

An immense raft, or rather a series of rafts, containing 2,800,000 feet of lumber, reached Chicago from the upper lakes, on Tuesday last. The total cost of towing it down was $3,342.

The sad disaster on the Pacific caused a temporary depression on the Stock Exchange yesterday forenoon, but owing to the general strong tone of the market, prices, except on Pacific Mail Shares, finally closed higher than on Wednesday. Exchange, 126; Gold, 114¼ ₱ cent.

A fair business was transacted in Breadstuffs, yesterday. Prices of Flour opened a shade firmer, but the market closed tamely. Wheat advanced about 2c., and Corn 1c.@1c. ₱ bushel. Provisions were more sought after; Pork and Lard were firmer. Sugars and Rio Coffee were in request, as were also Hay, Hops, Cassia, Tallow, Tobacco and Whisky. Cotton, Metals, Hides and Naval Stores were dull and heavy. The Freight engagements were moderate, though rates tended downward.

The Future of Canada—English Insincerity.

The recent debate in the English Parliament on Canadian affairs, an extended report of which may be found on another page, has no parallel in the history of the British Empire. The people of Canada are pointedly told that it is of no sort of consequence to the English Government whether they remain a component part of the Kingdom or not. Now, Canada is one of the largest dependencies of the English Crown. It has cost the mother country many millions of pounds to hold and fortify it. It has cost many millions more to build railroads and canals, and immense bridges, to develop it. It has cost larger sums still to guard it against apprehensions of American cupidity, and to settle international quarrels growing out of the North-eastern boundary, the burning of the steamer Caroline, and the capture of the Confederate envoys by Capt. WILKES. Canada, from having been a poor and sparsely settled Province, has grown to be a respectable and comparatively prosperous country. It has never been of any pecuniary value to the British Government, but now is in a fair way to become so, if the population has intelligence and energy to make available the vast improvements that British wealth has introduced among them. It is just at this moment that English statesmen declare to the world that the retention of Canada is not an object of their desire, and that the people of Canada may assume their independence whenever they think proper to do so.

As we have already observed, a certain school of British statesmen have recommended that the Colonies be encouraged to establish independent Governments. But while this is true of a sect, we are sorry to say we entirely doubt the honesty and candor of these recent and general declarations in Parliament. England is not in the habit of surrendering voluntarily any territory over which her authority has once been established. Witness her seven years' war to retain as Colonies the now independent States of America. And witness her more recent gigantic war to compel India to subjection to British rule.

England has three powerful motives for the perpetuation of her dominion over continents and the sea. The first is, the aggrandizement of the Kingdom among the nations of the earth, by the presence of power, and the exhibition of enormous wealth. The moral effect of great possessions is a positive power, understood by no Government better than by the English. In the second place, the widely extended possessions of England are a convenience and security to her commerce. They afford harbors, dock-yards, coaling stations, light-houses, supply-stations, and the protection of civil and naval officers, to every English ship that spreads its white wings upon the seas; and no other nation has so many in every quarter of the globe. In the third place, the presence of British authority introduces to all the people, where it prevails, goods of English manufacture and trade, on terms most promotive of the interests of the Kingdom. What though the governing of their foreign dependencies brings an annual deficiency to the English exchequer? In the incidental conveniences to commerce and profits to manufactures, the loss is more than made up. If this were not so, why would a practical people so long indulge in the folly of dominion as England has done?

We may safely set down the present exhibition of British indifference to Canada as humbug. We should be glad to see a public meeting held in that Province to accept the independence so graciously offered by the mother country. It would undoubtedly call forth a terrible growl from the British lion. And if the meeting should go a step further, and propose to join the United States on getting fairly clear of the British Government, we know that the growl would swell to a roar of rage. How could the English Government consent to see the Stars and Stripes of the American Union floating over all the costly structures of English pride and power in Canada? Only think for a moment of the ci-devant British Provinces under the Morrell Tariff!

The explanation of the late English babble about letting Canada go, we half suspect to be this: The governing classes of that country are in favor of Secession, and, in order to be consistent, they muts contend that territorial integrity is of no importance at all when set against the whims of the people, who need to be governed. The Southern States should be suffered to break up the Union, and go by themselves whenever they like. This is the present national sentiment in England. Apply the rule to Canada, and her people must have equal liberty of revolution. This is British gasconade. And, although the cases are wholly unlike, and England might well surrender a foreign province, while the United States could not surrender an integral and contiguous State, we need only have the project discussed in Canada of annexation to the United States to find how false are the present pretences of England, and how fiercely she would resist the loss of her Province.

The Burning of the Golden Gate.

The loss of that splendid steamship, the Golden Gate, accompanied by the sacrifice of a hundred and eighty lives, falls upon the community, used as it is to the waste of life, as a fearful shock and calamity. The disaster was wholly unexpected. In the Eastern Pacific half the terrors of sea travel are disarmed. In July there are no frightful gales and tremendous seas to imperil the strength of the vessel. Unless the pilot wander from a well-defined course, there are no reefs and shoals where he may be suddenly sunk. So plain and secure has been the journey from San Francisco to Panama, that the voyager has come to regard it as less formidable than the crossing of an inland ferry.

But from the one danger of which no vessel is free, even when its ribs and their coverings are of iron, the boats of the Pacific Steamship Company are not exempt. The Golden Gate was burned at sea. Nearly one-fourth of her passengers perished. Upon the Summer waters over which it passed there was every chance to escape, had means of escape been provided, and the loss of life is the measure of the vessel's deficiencies in life-saving apparatus. Herein, as the case stands at present, in the absence of details and explanations, there is a melancholy balance of reprobation due the Company for thus declining to spare from its immense accumulations the means of ensuring the life of every passenger in the event of disaster. The only apology must be that the safeguards against fire were so perfect, that accident seemed impossible. The fact seems to be otherwise. On the books of the underwriters, the Golden Gate is marked as deficient in securities against fire. Thus, not only did this opulent corporation, with its relentless monopoly of travel between the West and the East, decline to provide against the chances of the very calamity which has befallen the ship; but, as reckless of life as of property, it supplied inadequate facilities for saving the lives their parsimony imperilled. The million and more of money the Company loses by the fire, is, perhaps, a just judgment for such criminal economy. We speak, we repeat, on the single authority of the negre telegraphic dispatch hurried across the continent. It is sincerely to be hoped the particulars to come hereafter will mitigate the severity of the present verdict.

Union for the Sake of the Union.

President LINCOLN did an honor to himself in doing justice to Secretary STANTON, in the brief speech he delivered at the war meeting in Washington, on Wednesday afternoon. He declared that the Secretary of War had, at no time, withheld anything from Gen. MCCLELLAN that it was in the President's power to give him. And he further asserted that the supposed quarrel between STANTON and MCCLELLAN had less existence between them than between some of those presuming to be their friends.

Secretary STANTON has suffered very much in public estimation, because of his supposed refusal to reinforce Gen. MCCLELLAN for the great battles before Richmond. It is now found that he suffered wrongly, and that the President acted justly in refusing to dismiss him in order merely to appease a popular clamor. But the President fails to indicate where lies the blame for the inability to reinforce Gen. MCCLELLAN. The latter was in the enemy's country, in front of his capital, and opposed by an immense army, daily increasing in numbers.

No just reason has ever been given why recruiting was stopped—no explanation has been made of the discrepancy of 200,000 between the volunteers actually enrolled, and those reported to be enrolled. The Military Committee of the Senate was deceived—the Government was deceived—and the people were deceived. The men were not known to be lacking till Gen. MCCLELLAN wanted them and Mr. STANTON did not have them to send.

Perhaps the War Department is not to blame for not knowing how many soldiers it had in the field, and for stopping enlistments at the very time when the organization of a reserve was so necessary. We are glad to find the President giving so hearty an indorsement to the War Secretary; for it is better to have the people confide in all their officers than distrust any, seeing that they will be retained in their places by the President. And whatever errors or omissions may have marked the past, we may safely accept the President's statement of human philosophy, that, "in the selfishness of their natures," our leaders must all desire success; and, desiring it, they will work for it all the more zealously and effectively, perhaps, for having made some mistakes, and seen the unhappy results flowing from them. Let us have, then, the good old motto again, "Union, for the sake of the Union."

GEN. JACKSON'S TOAST.—Gen. JACKSON is credited with a terse and happy sentiment that has become familiar as household words in the United States. It is this: "The Federal Union—it must be preserved." It was given as a toast, a great many years ago, at a patriotic entertainment in Washington.

This compact, simple, and yet all-embracing sentence, fit to be the sublime war-cry of a great nation, is almost daily mutilated and diluted by public speakers and the Press. Tammany Hall has been chief in this corruption of the Old Hero's language, by hanging out a rude canvas with a daub of Gen. JACKSON, to say: "The Federal Union—it must and shall be preserved." And so distinguished a democrat as ROBERT J. WALKER is reported to have said, in a public speech in Washington, the other day, that, "in the words of Gen. JACKSON, the Union must and shall be preserved." This is worse, even, than Tammany, in its barbarous rendering of a noble, rotund, mouth and heart-filling sentiment.

We call the country to order, and require a greater respect to the memory of Old Hickory. He was not afraid to say "Federal Union," and he said it. He was not a man to multiply words. If a thing had to be done, he simply said it must be done, and it always was done. To say it must be done, and then add it shall be done, is weakness; for it implies that words can add to the moral necessity involved in the word must. Give us the Old Hero's phrase hereafter, pure and simple.

Multiply the Incentives.

"A peerage or Westminster Abbey," said NELSON, when he first descried the French fleet at anchor in the Bay of Aboukir. Fate was propitious this time, and the brave Admiral won the title which he bore till the fatal day of Trafalgar. But valued as was the distinction bestowed by his grateful country, it was probably not more highly prized by NELSON than was the simple copper medal, bestowed in acknowledgement of surpassing courage and devotion, by certain sailors and marines who helped to win the Battle of the Nile. Prize money is a capital thing in its way, and few honest tars object to receiving it; but the indestructible token of a nation's gratitude, which they may carry through life, and bequeath to their children, is a prize which money cannot buy, and which, to some natures, is the more powerful incentive. It is a silent but perpetual witness in favor of the character and worth of the wearer; and long after the prize money is scattered to the winds, its appeal has gained aid and asylum for the veteran, when decrepid age has left him no other resource.

In times of military exigency, it is sensible to adopt every stimulus to patriotic ardor which reason and history approve as likely to promote the end. Different natures are actuated by various and sometimes opposite considerations. Some are fond of money, some of glory, and some would esteem inestimably above either, such a symbol of national regard as a Nile medal or a Cross of the Legion of Honor. Promotion from the ranks has, without doubt, an excellent effect; but, even if pushed to an extreme in special instances, it can only apply to a very small fraction of the deserving. There are cases where a particular regiment or company, by a well-timed and heroic exhibition of courage, may win a battle, save an army, or carry a tremendous hostile position. It would, probably, be unreasonable and unwise, if not impossible, to make commissioned officers of all who have aided in the achievement; but there would be no impropriety in bestowing upon hundreds a sign of life-long consideration and honor, in the form of a WASHINGTON CROSS.

The title appears to us the most appropriate that could be devised, and it is the one of all others which would be satisfactory to the American people. The "Victoria Cross" is of plain bronze, and bears the inscription, "For Valor," the words being selected for the sensible reason that they express in the fewest possible number of letters the sentiment to be conveyed. While avoiding a servile imitation, something similar to this in form and spirit would, perhaps, be most convenient and acceptable. To commemorate highly-important battles, or other preëminently significant events of the war, medals should also be struck, and copies be conferred upon the bravest and most distinguished of the participators. Such has been the custom of great nations—republics as well as kingdoms—from the remotest antiquity, and no one has ever questioned the salutary effect.

Now that we are on the eve of most important events, and now that the army is to be so largely augmented, the step we suggest may be very happily carried into effect. Everything is important which helps to kindle in our troops the spirit of generous emulation. The simplest decoration, the reward of a single noble action, will add wonderfully to individual self-respect, and stimulate wholesomely the sense of responsibility. It will be congenial, also, to the democratic spirit of our armies, that a private soldier is not ineligible to a distinction which even Generals may be proud to wear. By all means, let us have a WASHINGTON CROSS.

STATE RIGHTS AND NEGRO REGIMENTS.—The Tribune shouts "Eureka" over a startling discovery it has just made. It has found out an ingenious solution of the problem of employing negro regiments. "State Rights" is the Open Sesame that is to unlock the desperate puzzle. Gov. SPRAGUE has called for a negro regiment, as part of the quota of Rhode Island. The Constitution and laws of Rhode Island treat whites and blacks alike, entitling the latter to vote on the same terms as the former; and therefore, it argues, "Rhode Island has a clear right to the service of all, whenever their service is needed." From these premises the Tribune proceeds thus to expatiate:

"State Rights afford an easy solution for the whole difficulty with respect to arming negroes. Some States do not regard their black residents as citizens, nor admit them to political rights. This is entirely their own affair, with which, so long as they discharge loyally their Federal obligations, other States have simply nothing to do. Some States pursue the opposite course, as it is their perfect right to do. If the Federal Government calls on the States for soldiers, each will respond—as in the Revolution—according to the genius of its own institutions and laws. The Federal Government will take from each such soldiers as it has to give, 'asking no questions for conscience sake.' And thus, in our complex but admirable Federal system, as in that of the universe, 'all Nature's difference makes all Nature's peace.'"

Now, we submit it is rather hard on the great heresy to be thus alternately cuffed and caressed. Our cotemporary has often enough whipped the devil of State Rights round the stump, and now, when it thinks he can do it some service, it falls to hugging him most affectionately. With characteristic blindness, however, it fails to see that its new auxiliary does not help it in the least. The doctrine finds precisely the same checks here that it does elsewhere when coming into conflict with the National sovereignty. Gov. SPRAGUE has a perfect right to "raise" a negro regiment, or a score of them. But the President of the United States, who is Commander-in-Chief of all the military forces, has an equal right to refuse to receive them. Not a regiment, or an individual of any complexion whatever, has part or lot in the business of fighting until it or he has passed through the regular process of being mustered into the service of the United States. The present policy of the President is clean and clear against the employment of blacks as soldiers; and so long as he remains in this mind no negroes will be mustered into service, though a hundred regiments were pressing to get in. We believe Gov. SPRAGUE is a man of too much practical good sense, not to say hearty patriotism, to waste time and effort—which are both now so precious—in a business that, in the present aspect of affairs, is necessarily utterly fruitless.

The Trade of England as Affected by the Rebellion.

We have received our usual early copy of the Annual Report of the British Board of Trade, which will be found very suggestive at the present moment. One of the most striking features of this report is, that while the British exports have been enormously diminished, the imports, especially from this country, have been much increased. The value of the manufactured products which England sent abroad in 1861, was nearly eleven million sterling less than were exported in the preceding year. Of this serious decrease, more than nine-tenths was due to the falling off in the trade with the United States. For, in 1860, the total value of the British products entered at our ports, amounted to twenty-one and a half millions, while last year it declined to nine millions, showing a diminution of upwards of twelve million, or nearly sixty per cent.

It is worthy of note that the only British product to which this imperious law of decrease did not extend was coal. This exemption is sufficiently accounted for by the fact that in England the supply of this article is unlimited, while the price is extremely low, and the freight small, so that, from the exigencies of steam-frigates, iron rams and cuirassed ships of war, the trade in coal is stimulated rather than depressed by the operations of modern warfare. In the exports of cottons, linens, woolens and metals, the largest proportional amount of diminution is found. The reshipment from British ports of foreign and colonial produce was almost as great as usual, a fact which, as the Commissioners suggest, may in part be accounted for by the trade having been turned aside from its natural course through the fear of capture on the high seas. Hence the owners of much foreign and colonial produce intended for America, thought it conducive to the safety of their cargoes to go to the additional expense of sending them to England in the first instance, and then forwarding the goods to their destination in British vessels, so as to secure the protection of a neutral flag.

But if under the operation of these and other causes Great Britain exported £12,000,000 sterling less than usual to this country, her necessities compelled her to import from us several millions more than usual. In 1860, the imports from the United States into England were less than £45,000,000 sterling. Last year, however, they rose to more than £49,000,000, of which nearly £22,000,000 was derived from the North, and about £27,000,000 from the South.

Such disproportion between the imports and exports must of necessity have disturbed the balance of trade. Accordingly, we find that throughout the year we were the creditor nation of the world. The exchanges ruled in our favor. There was a check to the usual steady flow to Europe of bullion, which is one of our chief national products. And instead of remitting £4,700,000 in gold and silver, as we did in 1860, we were able to send only £66,000 last year. And on the other hand, instead of receiving only £1,200,000 from England, we took no less than £7,300,000. Thus we had a balance on our trade with England of upward of ten millions of bullion. The importance of such results of our last year's foreign trade in strengthening the financial position of this country to meet the exigencies of the present war, it is impossible to over-estimate.

Although, however, England imported last year so much larger an aggregate of our products than usual, it is obvious that there must have been a large falling off under the head of cotton. The diminution of the cotton imports from this country alone amounted to 2,646,340 cwts. This statement, however, comprehends the transactions of the whole year, and as the Commissioners are careful to point out the aggregate returns of the year, offer no basis whatever for any theories or conclusions as to the future prospects of the trade. For the entire crop of 1860 had been shipped before the commencement of the blockade, and the apprehension of impending troubles tended to produce greater activity than usual in sending the crop forward. It is, therefore, to the returns of the second half of the year that we must look for the facts which will aid us in estimating the prospects of the trade. For the transactions of the first four months do not fall short of those of 1860 in any material degree. In May and June, however, the incipient paralysis of the trade was discernible, and there was a diminished activity, while in 1860 the month of June showed the greatest amount of business. From July to November, we observe a gradual falling off. Still, the July imports of last year were higher than those of 1860, and the comparative declension was not very great till the three closing months of the year. The imports during these months were as follows:

	1860. Cwts.	1861. Cwts.
October	130,732	3,630
November	52,702	200
December	1,944,240	4,020

In connection with the portion of the report from which we have derived these somewhat gloomy and unsatisfactory statistics, the Commissioners have prepared an elaborate statement of the various sources from which England has derived her supplies of cotton for the past year, with the quantities supplied by each country on the list. From this table it appears that of the total supply of 11,228,078 cwt., the Southern States produced 6,746,488 cwt.; the Northern States 570,581 cwt.; India 3,295,904 cwt.; Egypt 365,108 cwt.; and Brazil 154,378 cwt. Smaller quantities were collected from all parts of the world, as under the stimulus of high prices the accumulated stock of almost every country and colony were made tributary to the necessities of the cotton trade of Lancashire and Yorkshire. Thus it happens that such countries as Sweden, Holland and Belgium are found on the list. To similar causes we may probably attribute the fact that a few cotton-producing countries, such as Africa, Demarara, Hayti, New-Granada and Peru, supplied quantities exceeding 1,000 cwt. There is also evidence that in the case of the European countries, very little of the amount exported was of their own growth, as Turkey sent only 631 cwt. Nor was much more encouragement to be derived from the yield of those countries which have been so much talked of as likely to furnish immense supplies of cotton. Of those whose crops are represented in the Great Exhibition, Natal sent only 14 cwt., New South Wales 9 cwt., and the Argentine States, 81 cwt. Turning to another of our American staples, we note, under the head of tobacco, an increased import of more than a million pounds as compared with 1860, but the country of growth is not specified. The consumption of tobacco shows a diminution of about two per cent. As, however, the quantity was still above that of any previous year, except 1860, the falling off is attributed not to evasion of the revenue laws, but to numerous other obvious contingencies, among which will, of course, be the depressed state of trade, and the impoverishment of large multitudes of the operative classes. Such, then, is a general sketch of the chief items on both sides of the balance-sheet of Mr. Bull's commerce for the past year. A considerable decrease of the exports of the United Kingdom has for the first time in many years been consentaneous with a greatly increased demand for foreign products.

As to the causes of this diminution the Commissioners seem to be somewhat perplexed. In one part of the report they state that the whole of it may fairly be attributed to "the effects of the American war, and to the operation of the prohibitory policy introduced by the Morrill Tariff." But, as if sensible that this vague expression of opinion required some modification, they afterward suggest other causes, and admit that "it is difficult to estimate how much of the loss is to be attributed to the doubts of American solvency, and to the blockade of the Southern ports." We have no doubt that both these last-named causes, especially the former, were actively efficient in producing a decline in trade which has proved as disastrous to England as it has been inconvenient to us. Those British journals, therefore, which, like the London Times and its imitators, have exerted themselves to fan the flames of international discord, and, while irritating the minds of the American Nation, have tried to destroy British confidence in our honesty, solvency and good faith, may have the consolation of reflecting, that, like treacherous or maladroit allies, they have done harm where they little meant it, and by injuring British commerce, have aimed their unpatriotic blow at the very vitals of their country, when they supposed they were acting in its defence and for its benefit. With regard to the effect attributable to the blockade, it has been shown that, while during the third quarter of the year the Southern trade was diminished considerably, it became almost extinct in the fourth. From this fact alone we find sufficient proof, were we not overwhelmed with evidence already, that during the closing three months of the fiscal year, our blockade was complete, and the Southern ports fairly closed.

THE PERIOD OF QUIET.—The present is a moment of great quietude all over the field of military operations. Doubtless, if the rebel leaders intend to attack any of our armies, or to attempt an advance anywhere, they will do it soon. They have got the news before now that by the 15th of this month, or shortly thereafter, the three hundred thousand three-years' troops will be in the field, and about the same time the three hundred thousand nine-months' men—a grand army six hundred thousand strong—will have been enlisted. It cannot be that they are waiting till we get our full million of soldiers all under arms before they try the issue of battle. That will certainly be at least twice the number of men that JEFF. DAVIS has in his service. They know that while at present their army may outnumber ours, by the end of this month ours will vastly outnumber theirs. In Virginia alone we shall probably concentrate a half million men, before September. They know that now is the most favorable opportunity they will ever have to make a bold and desperate stroke at MCCLELLAN, or at POPE, or at Washington. There are signs that they are again preparing to attack Gen. MCCLELLAN; and the telegraph this morning announces that they are advancing in force toward Malvern Hill, which our troops occupied on Tuesday last, and which it is said to be the intention of Gen. MCCLELLAN to hold. We are glad to learn that Gen. MCCLELLAN'S position has been greatly strengthened, that he can be aided by the gunboats and mortar fleet, and that, though the rebels may think this is our weakest time, we may yet be much stronger than they know of.

POLICE FOR SOLDIERS.—It will be noticed that the Metropolitan Police force has been invited by the President of the Police Board to volunteer for the military service of their country. We think that those who do not enlist themselves, should, like the employes of the City Post-office, be required to furnish at least one recruit for the army. The Police force comprises twenty-three hundred able-bodied men in the prime of life; and, if each of these men who does not enlist himself were to furnish a substitute, it would give us at once three regiments of 750 men each. The volunteering closes next week, and there must be no time lost.

Fire at Olean, N. Y.

OLEAN, N. Y., Thursday, Aug. 7.

The large three-story building, occupied by the Olean Times, and three other buildings, consisting of stores, offices, &c., were destroyed by fire last night. There was great loss of property by fire and water. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. The loss is well insured.

French Intervention Projects at a Stand-Still.

Latest Aspects of the Mexican Question.

The Arabia, from Liverpool, July 26, arrived yesterday, bringing our files and correspondence up to that date. We have already published a full summary of the general news; but there are some matters of sufficient importance to deserve more detailed notice.

PARIS ASPECTS OF THE AMERICAN QUESTION.

The Intervention Project at a Stand Still—The Meddlers Hushed Up—Preoccupation of France in the East, Mexico and Europe—The Mexican Programme—French Opposition to the Expedition—Confederate Naval Officers Abroad—Rebel Trade Between Europe and Nassau.

PARIS, Friday, July 25, 1862.

There are many reasons for believing that, notwithstanding the assertions of the journals, or rather of certain journals, to the contrary, no negotiations, no movements of any kind, are going on in the Cabinets of Europe having in view an intervention in American affairs. It has been generally recognized that neither mediation nor intervention would be accepted, and that neither would cure the commercial ills Europe is now suffering from; so that, however strong may be the desire to see the war terminated, that result will not be attempted by the European States. The alarms which are so frequently sounded on this subject proceed from writers who know but little of the merits of the question, and who see only two facts: the suffering of the people, and the desire of the Governments that the struggle should come to an end. They see clearly the European, but have no knowledge whatever of the American side of the question. It is not strange, therefore, that these alarms should be so frequently sounded.

Since the repulse of the Union army before Richmond, we hear and read so much against the North that it is with difficulty we stem the current; and for this we are indebted mainly to the English journals, and in a less degree to the Courier des Etats Unis. As I have already told you, the tone of the Secession Press here has moderated of late, no doubt as the result of an order from the Ministry to that effect, but this moderation only extends to the original matter in the journals, and does not prevent them from copying all the brutalities and falsehoods of the London Times, and other secession papers, so that, for a fortnight past, we have been overwhelmed with this sort of thing; but we know that the world admires success, and that so soon as the Union army resumes its march again we shall have less of the exaggerations of these croakers.

The hopes expressed in England and the fears expressed in the United States that France intends to interfere between the North and South, have not, however, a shadow of a chance of realization, unless such an intervention is brought about by some collateral question, such as that of Mexico. France has enough on her hands just now in Europe and Mexico to occupy her serious attention, without interfering in the United States in a question to which she is an entire stranger, and in which she has nothing to gain and everything to lose. She is obliged to send soldiers to China—a considerable number have just left; notwithstanding the peace just signed with Cochin China, a strong garrison must be left to protect the three provinces she has taken from that Power; GARIBALDI is threatening the French at Rome and the Austrians on the Dalmatian coast, both points of danger for the peace of Europe; a bloody and protracted war is being waged in Montenegro, which is watched with great interest by all the European Powers, while in Servia events are transpiring which bring up the eternal Eastern question and require the intervention of the Western Powers of Europe. Lastly, France has engaged in an expedition to Mexico which is going to consume enormously more of men, money and time than she had counted on, and much more than she can spare, either in view of the condition of her Treasury, or of the benefits to be derived from the expedition. There is, therefore, really no danger of a French intervention.

The Mexican expedition will be carried to twenty-eight or thirty thousand men. It is generally believed that, as regards the policy to be adopted, after the army is firmly established at the capital, there will be a return to the monarchical programme and to a complete revolution of the institutions and political condition of the country. But the Emperor changes his home and his European policy daily and as circumstances dictate; he will probably do the same in Mexico. So that all we have to do is to wait and watch. Only, the more rapidly the American Government develops its power on land and sea, the less will NAPOLEON penetrate into the institutions and politics of Mexico.

The policy of the Emperor in Mexico, as it is understood at this moment, is heartily condemned by the great majority of the intelligent men of France; and were it not that the army has a defeat to wipe out and an affront to revenge, the opposition to the expedition would be much more vigorous and marked. As it is, but few are willing to deny to the army the pleasure, or rather the obligation, of taking revenge on the army of ZARAGOSSA; and that once done, it would not be strange to see the Emperor soften down and materially modify the programme which now seems uppermost.

The number of Confederate naval officers abroad is very considerable, and daily increasing. These gentlemen, it appears, find no difficulty in crossing in small craft to Cuba or to Nassau, for it is much easier running out than in. These gentlemen are engaged for the most part in the contraband trade between England and Nassau, and Nassau and the American Coast. To the English island goods are carried in large vessels, and from there to the Southern Coast in small vessels. An Englishman was heard to boast, the other day, that of five steamers he owned in the contraband trade with the Southern States, he had lost but one by seizure, and he could afford that loss, for he had gained a fortune with the others. Something like forty steamers are engaged in this trade to Nassau, only a few of which attempt to run the blockade, the most of them distributing their cargoes to the smaller vessels in waiting at the island. According to the testimony of the Southern officers who arrive here, the business of the island of Nassau has acquired dimensions never dreamed of by the residents, and very many of them are rapidly acquiring fortunes.

Notwithstanding the defeat at Richmond, the Southern people still say that SCOTT and MCCLELLAN, who, they believe, work together, are the two great and only geniuses in the Union army. I give you their testimony for what it is worth.

MALAKOFF.

DEBATE ON THE DEFENCE OF CANADA.

In the House of Commons, on the 25th inst., Mr. ADDERLEY wished, before the Secretary for War rose to reply to the question that had been put to him, to make a few observations upon a most important subject. It was most desirable that Parliament should not separate without some distinct statement being made of the intentions of the Government as to the defence of Canada. It was their right and duty, as it was the right and interest of the Canadians, to know what were the intentions of the Government in view of the possible if not probable dangers of the approaching Winter. In the first place, he would wish to know whether the Government considered that Canada was exposed to any danger. If not, why were 12,000 British troops retained in that colony; and if there was danger, to what did they look for defence against that danger? The noble lord at the head of the Government had urged upon the House the duty of protecting the country against invasion, but in respect of Canada, which was more vulnerable, he had not urged any precautions either in this country or in the colony. At the commencement of last Winter, 12,000 British troops were sent out in great haste to meet an apprehended danger, and to enable Canada to prepare her means for self-defence. There was no Quixotic intention to defend Canada by means of forces sent from this country, nor to exempt the Canadians from military service; but the aid was sent to assist and to encourage them in preparing their own means of defence.

As matters stood, we were in a most critical position with regard to Canada. It was an utter impossibility to defend the colony with twelve thousand British troops. If invasion came, the loss of Canada was absolutely certain, and that was not all. We should lose our troops, should bring upon ourselves disgrace and disaster, and then involve the country, on a point of honor, in a hopeless war. [Hear.] What was the other course open? That which Earl GREY recommended the other day in another place, namely: that not a moment should be lost in causing the Canadian Parliament distinctly to understand that it must reconsider the measures of internal defence, making more valid preparation, or before Winter every man of the 12,000 British troops should return to England. The present state of things could only last, he believed, till the first trial came; and if an emergency occurred, then Canada would be inevitably lost to this country. If no emergency occurred, then the connection might last in mutual deception for some time; but whenever the trial came, the separation of Canada from this country was inevitable, and would, if Ministers only chose to trust to the chapter of accidents for the crisis, be then attended with disastrous consequences. He therefore called on the noble lord at the head of the Government to state what were his intentions. Let the noble lord treat the case in a dignified way, and if the loss of Canada was not to be cared for, let the Canadians know that in time, so that amicable arrangements might be made on both sides for the interests of Canada and for the honor of this country. [Hear, hear.]

Mr. ROEBUCK—The first thing we have to consider is, what is the feeling of the people of Canada with respect to England? My opinion is that the people of Canada have been led to believe that we consider them of such wonderful importance that we shall undertake any expense to maintain dominion over them. [Hear, hear.] What I want them to understand, and what I want our Government to make them understand, is that we do not care one farthing about the adherence of Canada to England. [Hear, hear.] We have never drawn from our Colonies anything like tribute. Other nations do at this moment derive tribute from their Colonies, but we have never done so. The only chance of benefit we ever expected from our Colonies was perfect freedom of trade. What has Canada done in that matter? The Canadians have paid 20 per cent. upon the introduction of all English manufactures into their country, thereby following the bad example of their friends on the other side of the St. Lawrence. [Hear, hear.] I want them clearly to understand that England has no benefit from her connection with them, and if we maintain, not our dominion, but their independence, it is for their advantage and not for ours. [Hear, hear.] There is nobody in this country who is in a position to speak with more freedom than myself with respect to Canada. Many years of my life were spent in that country. I have intimate relations with it now; but, though I do not love Canada less, I love England more; and my opinion is, that if to-morrow we were to get rid of Canada, England would not lose a single farthing of benefit. [Hear, hear.] But the case of Canada would be very different. When the honorable and gallant member for Westminster says that the United States cannot overrun Canada, I must say that I think he has studied history to very little purpose, if that be his real opinion. I quite agree with the noble Lord in another place, who said that, if the Federal Government were victorious to-morrow, they would turn round upon England, and the first thing they would do would be to pour their armies over the St. Lawrence into Canada; while if they were to be defeated in their struggle with the South, out of mere vengeance, they would do the same thing. [Hear, hear.] What would be the consequence? Canada, ceasing to be what she is now—a powerful and independent people, governing themselves, doing exactly as they like with their own, would be under the dominion of an overbearing and overpowering democracy. [Hear.] She would be one among what were once thirty-seven United States. Her people would have one or two votes in the American Senate; whereas now they govern themselves—for England has given up dominion over them, and all we do is to send our soldiers—those red-coats whom the Mayor of Montreal talks about—to protect their independence. [Hear, hear.] I want the Canadians clearly to understand that England would not be sorry to see them depart from her to-morrow. [Hear, hear.] They do us no good, at least not more than New-York; they do not receive our manufactures and they treat us like aliens. [Hear, hear.] We have been told that the House of Commons should not dictate to the Parliament of Canada. Do we ever dictate now? I have stood up in my place against the dictation of this House to the people of Canada, but that system has been abandoned long ago. The very veto of the Crown is entirely ignored, and that which we ought to have done—viz., protect the manufacturing interests of England—we have ceased to do. I say, therefore, we are now bound to look after the interests of our constituents, and I shall be the very last man to lay one farthing of expense upon the poor people of Sheffield, in order to maintain the independence of the rich people of Canada. [Cheers.]

Sir G. C. LEWIS—It is true, as my honorable and gallant friend (Gen. Sir D. LACY EVANS, stated, that at present they do not anticipate any immediate danger of invasion, nor do Her Majesty's Government think, looking to the state of the contest between the North and South—looking to the manner in which the affair of the Trent was treated by the Government of the United States—looking generally to the condition of affairs in that country, that there is any immediate probability, under any circumstances, of the rupture of pacific relations with the United States. The Government of the United States must be well aware that an invasion of Canada is not merely an invasion of Canada; it is a war with England, [hear, hear,] and, of course, if the United States were to seek a war with England, and originate a ground of dispute, and invade British territory, they would look forward to interference with the Southern blockade by the British fleet, the relief of the blockade, and the entire reverse of much of the state of things with the South which now exists. Giving them credit for ordinary prudence, under trying and difficult circumstances, nothing at present seems more unlikely than that the United States should voluntarily originate a war with so powerful a nation as England, and one possessing so effective and disposable a fleet. Well, under these circumstances, even, although the Canadian Government, contrary to our expectations, contrary to our wishes, contrary to the policy which Lord MONCK, the Governor, has expressed, and which has been admitted by the people of Canada, have not made those efforts which they ought to have made for strengthening their militia, still, Her Majesty's Government do not think that any ground exists for regretting having sent out reinforcements to Canada. The right honorable gentleman proposes a penal withdrawal of our troops from Canada—that is, we are to say to Canada, "Because you have not established a sufficient militia for the protection of your frontier, we will withdraw our troops and leave your frontier wholly undefended." Is that a dignified and reasonable course for England to adopt toward Canada? I confess I can hardly conceive anything more unworthy of the Legislature of this country, or of the Government of this country, than such a vindictive proceeding. [Hear, hear.] I have already said that I think, under existing circumstance in the United States, there is little probability of an immediate invasion of Canada, and I will only suggest to the House, that although it is an unquestionable and lamentable fact that great irritation exists on the part of the people of the Northern States against England—an irritation which, I may say, was as undeserved by the course which the Government have pursued towards the United States, [hear, hear,] as it was wholly unexpected—yet that irritation has been mainly caused by the recognition of the Southern States as a belligerent Power. There may have been minor causes of irritation, but undoubtedly the main cause of the irritation that has existed has been the recognition by this country of the Southern States as a belligerent Power. I cannot but think, as this contest proceeds, that the people of the Northern States, notwithstanding the excitement and the disappointment which the course of events may produce, must see, upon reflection, that England had, in fact, no other alternative than that which she adopted. It was necessary for Her Majesty's Government to consider not only the feelings of the country, but also the international relations that are created by the existence of a great war. If the people of the Southern States had been regarded as rebels, their ships fitted out as privateers must have been treated as pirates by England; and it was only by recognizing the South in its real character of a belligerent that insoluble difficulties connected with the law of nations have been avoided. And really, Sir, I can hardly understand why the Northern States should so much resent the recognition of the belligerency of the Southern States, when I remember that, according to their own repeated declarations, they have an army of between 600,000 and 700,000 men on foot; and that after the recent battle near Richmond, the President has made an appeal for an addition of 300,000 men to that large force. [Hear, hear.] The mere statement of these numbers is surely sufficient to prove that the Power against which all these mighty preparations are made at least deserves the name of a belligerent Power. [Hear.] It is impossible to conceive that they can be correctly designated as a mere accidental, casual agglomeration of rebels. The resistance to the authority of the United States has acquired a firmness, a compactness and a consistency which justly entitle the persons composing it to the name of a belligerent Power. I cannot, therefore, but think that, taking all these very obvious circumstances into consideration, the Northern States will see that the only important step with reference to this matter taken by England was not only justifiable, but inevitable. [Hear, hear.] Before I sit down I will only make one allusion to the remarks of my honorable and learned friend upon our future relations with Canada. I, for one, can only say that I look forward without apprehension—and, I may add, without regret—to the time when Canada might become an independent State—[hear, hear;] but I think it behooves England not to cast Canada loose, or send her adrift before she has acquired sufficient strength to assert her own independence. [Hear, hear.] We should not, by any acts of momentary irritation or ill humor which might throw her into the arms of the United States, place her in a position in which she would become annexed to a Power involved in a serious contest, and which has lately added millions to its national debt.

Mr. DISRAELI would be sorry to anticipate the arrival of the time when the connection between Canada and this country should terminate. There was no doubt, however, that the relations between the self-governing colonies and the mother country were becoming daily less satisfactory, but he did not see how we could summarily hasten and adopt any remedy for evils which were in a great degree the result of our own eagerness in conceding, after obstinately resisting, their independence [Hear, hear.] We must rather trust to the spirit and sense of the inhabitants, and in a large measure to the character, talents, and resources of the Governors whom we sent out to them. In this particular the fault of the Government was that they had not been thoughtful on the subject of training Canada to independence. On the contrary, they had not trusted sufficiently to the resources and energies of the colonists, but had rather unnecessarily anticipated those duties which the Canadians themselves would have been ready to perform. Their interference in June last year, when they sent 3,000 men to Canada, was an intimation to the Canadians that we were ready to undertake a monopoly of their defence. It damped their ardor, and led to the unfortunate state of circumstances that now prevailed. [Hear, hear.] He regarded our colonial empire as one conducive to our strength. He could not measure its advantages by the commercial profits, or even the military force, which, in an emergency, we might derive from such a connection; but the very fact that we belonged to a vast empire, which was founded on those principles of freedom and equality which were necessary to the prosperity of such an empire, was itself a source of strength to this country, in the elevation which it gave to the character of our countrymen, and the influence it exercised on the councils of Europe and the course of human events. [Hear, hear.] He did not despair that our present relations with Canada might be modified, and affairs there assume a more satisfactory aspect. [Cheers.]

Lord PALMERSTON—I agree rather with the right honorable gentleman who has just spoken, than with the right honorable gentleman the member for North Staffordshire, in the view he takes with respect to the connection subisting between the mother country and her colonial dependencies. With the former, I quite concur in thinking that we should look upon the colonies as part and parcel of the British Empire. [Hear, hear.] Our fellow-subjects, when they remove from this country, do not cease to be our fellow-subjects; their spirit is the same as ours; their interests should be our interests; we should be to each one another a sourse of mutual honor and mutual strength. [Hear, hear.] I regret very much that, owing to circumstances which, it appears, will happen in countries possessing free institutions, local questions have resulted in the refusal on the part of the Canadian Legislature to make adequate provision for the defence of the colony. Generally speaking, it may be said that we are proud of the conduct and bearing of our Canadian fellow-subjects; but on the present occasion, I certainly feel no such sentiment. It is, I think, but little to their credit that they should allow party considerations to exercise such an influence over them as to cause them to refuse to make many provision for their defence in case of need. [Hear, heh.] I cannot at the same time concur with the right honorable gentleman opposite in ascribing that result to the measure which we took in the Summer of last year, in sending out three thousand men to Canada; nor can I agree with him in regarding that step as an indication on our part that the mother country meant to undertake a monopoly of the defence of the colony. The defence must surely be a very easy and trifling matter, if 3,000 men could be considered as sufficient to give us a monopoly of it, in opposition to all the dangers to which Canada may be exposed. I think we judged rightly in sending out the force in question. The garrisons in our North American provinces were at the time greatly reduced in consequence of the demands arising out of the Crimean war. They were much lower than they had been before that war, and, looking to the position of the United States, and to the civil war which had broken out in that quarter, we, in my opinion, took a wise and proper precaution in sending some amount of reinforcement to those garrisons, even although there might be no apprehension of immediate danger so far as Canada was concerned.

I am glad this discussion has been raised, because it has enabled the Secretary of State for War to make a statement which must satisfy the Canadians that, unless they choose to make those exertions which it is becoming in them to make for their own defence; which it is their duty to themselves to make; which any people worthy of the name or men would make, [hear, hear]—unless they mean to fall into a state of apathy, and betray a want of spirit which would be disgraceful to the race to which they belong—we have done as much for them as we intend to do, and that it rests with them to do the remainder. That they are able, if they choose, to do what is needful, nobody can doubt, because they have men in number and spirit sufficient to resist any attack which may be made upon them. [Hear, hear.] I think we have done neither too much nor too little. We do not intend either to recall the troops now in Canada, or to send any additional men there, for we cannot but believe that when the factious conflict which has taken place in Canada is over, and has resulted in the establishment of some government likely to be permanent, the spirit of the people will urge their representatives to make more ample, more satisfactory, and more worthy provision for the defence of their country in case of danger. [Cheers.]

Cobden on the Cotton Question.

In the House of Commons, on the 23d ult., Mr. COBDEN made a speech on the Relief bill, in the course of which he said:

"The present dearth of cotton and paralysis of industry have not arisen from any natural causes, and this is the reason why you have so much difficulty in dealing with them. If the want of cotton were occasioned by the fact that the Southern States of America had been suddenly visited by a blight, like that, for instance, which destroyed the vines in Madeira, then other countries, seeing that no more cotton was to be expected from that district, would be immediately tempted by the promise of high prices to supply the demand. If, again, there had been a servile war in America—an insurrection of the negroes—which threatened to put an end to the cultivation of cotton, that would have insured its own remedy according to the ordinary principles of political economy, for cotton would immediately have been grown in other parts of the world. But this calamity has befallen us from a totally different cause. Two countries are at war. I call them two countries, because as belligerents they are so—[loud cries of "Hear"]—and one of these belligerents has imposed a blockade upon the other. Such a system of warfare may have been very well suited to the middle ages, but it is totally unsuited to an age which is governed by the principles of political economy, and it is England more than any other country in the world which has perpetuated that absurd system of warfare. However, these remarks only enable us fully to understand the position in which we are placed. At this moment you have in America, subjected to blockade, from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 bales of cotton, because I hold that very little of it has been absolutely destroyed. This was intended for last year's supply, and besides this you have 1,000,000 or 1,500,000 bales now growing, the greater part of which was intended for this country. [Hear, hear.] Now, that quantity of cotton hanging over the market paralyzes all operations, and prevents any natural remedy being applied to cure this state of things. If it were anything but an extraordinary and unnatural cause which had produced this collapse in Lancashire,—if, for instance, there were a failure in the coal or iron of this country, so that the manufacture were likely to cease to be carried on, then you might obtain a natural remedy, and might apply the principle of the Poor Law in the greatest river even with charity and mercy to the people concerned. You might tell them, as they had no employment, to disperse over the land and find occupation elsewhere, because it was evident they could no longer find employment where they were. But that is not the case in the present instance. There is all the necessary fixed capital—the machinery—in the cotton manufacturing districts, and there exists also a set of manufacturers who will employ the population when they get the raw material, and I believe that the raw material will come, but whether in six months or twelve months it is impossible to say. I do not believe that the cotton in America is destroyed, but I believe it will find its way to England; and it is because other people believe the same that the trade is in this state of paralysis.

The Times on the Prophetic Tripod Again.

From the London Times, July 26.

We must do the New-York Press the justice to say, that, so far as we have seen, it treats the disasters of the Federals with sufficient fairness. Though, to a certain extent, echoing the mendacious bulletins of the Government and the pompous addresses of Gen McCLELLAN, it is still independent enough, and honest enough to let the country understand the whole truth. While Falstaff and Bobadil describe their exploits, the newspaper correspondents quietly explain matters in a manner that has filled the Northern cities with consternation. Since these battles, hardly a single prediction has been hazarded of the ultimate conquest of the South. Exhortations to persevere, to send reinforcements, to deliver the Federal army from its difficulties, to avenge the dishonor of its flag by a triumphant entry into Richmond, have, of course, been plentiful, but, as to anything further, there is a dead and most portentous silence. In fact, it is felt that the defeat of McCLELLAN'S army has changed everything. But a fortnight before, a vast and well-provided force was investing the capital city of the South, defended, as it was thought, only by a few starving regiments. All was joy and ignorant confidence. Now the truth is revealed. A whole population is seen to have risen in arms; enthusiasm and devotion have made good all deficiencies; Generals of consummate skill are at the head of a soldiery of fanatical courage, and an army equal to the greatest of those with which European rulers make war guards the frontier of the Confederacy, after having crushed the main force of the invaders. The Northerners, though they have shown themselves more liable to delusion than any one could have believed of such a people, are not fools; and, in spite of the boasting and lying of their Government, they are receiving the conviction that such a people as the Confederates can never be subjugated. If it were a war for a fortress or a frontier, they would not be discouraged; but when they reflect on the object of the present invasion, and remember that they have undertaken not only to defeat the armies of LEE and BEAUREGARD, but to utterly destroy them, to occupy the whole Southern territory and garrison it year after year with a standing army of at least a quarter of a million of men, it may well be imagined that they are cooled and sobered by the prospect. We cannot but think that a great change of feeling is likely to take place at the North. The undercurrents of the popular mind are at first not visible; it is only when they have gained volume and strength that they can change the course of the stream. But there is enough to show that multitudes of the Northern people are becoming weary of this purposeless slaughter. About the temper of the business men there can be little doubt; they have been for many weeks giving to the cause of peace all the influence which their own timidity and the constitution of American society will allow them. But now we have fair grounds for believing that matters have gone further, and that the great body of the people are slowly coming round to the opinions of their less shortsighted countrymen. That these will be candid and confess their own madness is not to be expected. A people never recants. But they may shove their rulers, by signs not to be mistaken, that they will tolerate no more of Mr. LINCOLN'S crusade. The question will be soon determined. If this war is to go on, the immense levy ordered by the President must be actually made. The 300,000 men must be forthcoming if Virginia is to be conquered, or if even Tennessee is to be held. But they will not be forthcoming. We are told in the last dispatches that the volunteering makes slow progress, and that the question of a conscription continues to be discussed. Our correspondent declares that in eleven days only 15,000 men had come forward, in spite of the enormous bounty, amounting in all to $150, that was offered to each man, by the Federal and State Governments. Drafting for service, or, in other words, a conscription, was talked about; but we should think it would be only talked about. The scheme of a forcible levy of troops in a republic to subjugate and hold down another republic is one that will hardly be seriously proposed, even by the more fanatical of Mr. LINCOLN'S advisers. All now, therefore, depends on the enlistment that is going on under the President's proclamation. If this fails, then all is over, and after a few months the independence of the South must be acknowledged, as it might have been with profit a twelvemonth ago.

American Tribute to German Sympathy.

A letter from Frankfort of the 21st states:

At the German National Rifle Shooting Festival, the Americans residing in that city and its neighborhood were numerously represented. On the preceding Monday, a Committee of thirty-four—one for each State of the Union—presented to the German "Schützenbund" (the German National Riflemen's Association) the beautiful silk Union flag sent as a gift by the German Riflemen's Club of Philadelphia. Upon that occasion Consul-General W. W. MURPHY, as President of the Committee, made the following remarks:

"It affords me great pleasure to be here to-day, more particularly since I have the honor of being deputed to present to the Association this beautiful banner—the emblem of American liberty—the gift of their brother Germans of the Philadelphia Rifle Club. It is the flag of a great Republic, representing the thirty-four States of the Union—a Union one and indivisible. A civil war now devastates our country; it is a second war for constitutional liberty. In 1776 we waged a great war for human rights, and now we are again compelled to engage in a sanguinary and expensive struggle for the same great object. In the organization of our Confederacy, we were cursed with the institution of Slavery existing in several of the States. This war was commenced by the people of the South for the extension and perpetuation of that evil. The Northern army are fighting for the Union, the Constitution, and freedom—the South for disunion, Slavery, and despotism. A hundred thousand of your fellow German citizens are marching, under the leadership of a SIGEL, BLENKER, WEBER, Prince SALIN, and other distinguished Germans, carrying this glorious Star Spangled Banner to victory. They ask for your prayers and sympathies in this great struggle. Shall they have them? I know you will respond, 'Yes!' It is a common saying in America, when we speak of the infusion or emigration of a foreign people in great numbers, that 'the Dutch have taken Holland.' Well, there are parts of America where the Germans are so numerous that we can, in truth, say the Germans have taken Germany. Many of the populous cities have more Germans than Americans, and in many other cities—like Cincinnati, St. Louis and Milwaukee—they constitute a great share of the population. They make good citizens, always ready to maintain the laws and usages of their adopted country. In parts of Pennsylvania, so great is the veneration of the Germans for the language of their fatherland, that they prohibit the teaching of English in the common schools. I have been informed that other German-American rifle-clubs have sent presents and deputations, and had it not been for our civil war, they would have sent them from all the principal cities. The organization of this 'Schützenfest' Association is said to be in some way connected with a political movement, having for its object the extension of liberal sentiments and laws. I hope it will meet with success. America hopes to see a free and united Germany. In conclusion, I must mention the enlightened and liberal Duke of Saxe Coburg-Gotha, and the Grand Duke of Baden, who have contributed so much in aid of this Association. Throughout America they are venerated for their liberal views, and in the press and in the cottage and the schools are their names everywhere mentioned in honorable terms. May their days be long and useful; and it is to be hoped that all the Princes of Germany will follow their example. Future generations will lisp their names with reverence, and erect monuments to their memory in the affections of their hearts."

After these remarks, Mr. AUGUSTUS GLAESER, Secretary of the United States Consulate-General, addressed the Germans in their own language, assembled in thousands in front of the "Gaben-tempel," (gift temple,) where the flag was waving. The flag was then delivered, amidst the most enthusiastic cheers by the crowd, by Consul-General MURPHY, to the Duke ERNEST, of Saxe-Coburg, as President of the German National Riflemen's Association.

A Secesh Rejoinder to Thurlow Weed.

To the Editor of the London Times:

SIR: Mr. THURLOW WEED, in his address to the Municipality or Common Council of New-York, has been guilty of a willful error or misstatement. He says that Mr. GLADSTONE, in a recent speech at Manchester, stated "that the Union was but a copartnership, dissoluble whenever passion or caprice prompted in any of the parties a desire to withdraw. He overlooked or ignored the circumstance that our secession copartners, in retiring, broke open the safe, &c., —i. e., seized the arms, the Custom-house, the Post-offices, and the public moneys;" the conclusion to the remark being that, if perpetrated in England, the parties "would have been consigned to the Tower or the Penitentiary."

Mr. WEED ignores the fact that the Post-office buildings, the Custom-houses, the arms, &c., were the common property of the country, being paid for principally from Custom-house receipts and the sale of public lands, a much larger amount flowing into the Treasury from the latter source during the last few years in the South than in the North. It is also a well-known fact that three Commissioners were dispatched to Washington specially to arrange the value of these buildings, and strike a balance, as it were, between the two parties. It is also a well-known fact that Mr. LINCOLN never gave these Commissioners an audience officially, but led them to believe for six weeks that he would do so. The public moneys in the South, at the time of the secession of the different States, not amounting to over £30,000, were transmitted to Washington, or drawn for in the shape of drafts from the Secretary of the Treasury; the Southern States, to my certain knowledge, never having denied their liability for the rendition of the public money in the way indicated. This is only one of the many transparently false arguments by which the great mass of the Federals are taught to believe that the South acted the part of public robbers, and, if not corrected, might lead your readers into the same error as Mr. THURLOW WEED has willingly led the Northern Americans.

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,
A FRIEND OF THE SOUTH.

EIGHTEENTH WARD UNION MEETING.—At a meeting of the Union citizens of the Eighteenth Ward, held yesterday, pursuant to call, for the purpose of choosing delegates to the State Convention, Mr. WILLIAM RICHARDSON was called to the Chair, and Mr. ELIAL F. HALE was chosen Secretary. JAMES M. THOMSON and CHARLES MCNIEL were chosen Delegates, and JAMES T. HAMILTON and WILLIAM RICHARDSON Alternates. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That it is the duty of every citizen to rally to the support of the Government in this the most perilous crisis of its history, and to be ready at all times to sacrifice everything for the salvation of the Constitution and the Republic.

Resolved, That the present exigencies of military affairs demand a more determined and vigorous policy in prosecuting the war than that hitherto pursued; and that we therefore hail with the liveliest satisfaction the call just made for 300,000 militia, to be raised by draft, in addition to the 300,000 volunteers previously called for.

THE BRODERICK WILL.—We learn that the will of the late Hon. DAVID C. BRODERICK, by which the testator left the whole of his landed estate to Gustave WILKES, has been finally and absolutely confirmed by the Supreme Court of California.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS.

John K. Murphy, Colonel Twenty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers; Geo. W. Neff, Lieutenant-Colonel Second Kentucky Volunteers; A. S. Cassidy, Major Ninety-third New-York Volunteers; Ross A. Fish, Captain Thirty-second New-York Volunteers; Chas. Walter, Lieutenant First Connecticut; C. C. Gray, Assistant Surgeon U. S. A.; L. S. Stockwell, Paymaster U. S. N.

Capt. Cox, of the First Kentucky, recited a poem, of which the following are the opening and closing stanzas:

Long years ago, when Uncle Sam
Divided his estate, Sirs,
He little knew what was decreed
To be his children's fate, Sirs;
He had but thirteen at the start
To work his great big farm, Sirs,
And when the British found it out,
They said we meant them harm, Sirs;
Then over they came, a hundred sail,
With loads of men and money,
To wipe us out as bears do bees
When foraging for honey.
They tried to coax us into terms
With many a sly pretence, Sirs;
But Uncle Sammy knew their game,
And pitched them o'er the fence, Sirs.
* * * * * * *
Haste then the day, the looked-for day,
When Peace shall claim her wonted sway,
And willing hands and hearts obey
Her mandates wise and just;
Mark those who govern to betray
A nation's hope and trust.

The poem was delivered by Capt. J. T. DREW. The following are specimen extracts:

When Israel's Bard was urged to sing,
And cheer the hours with genial song,
He could not tune a single string
Of Harp that had been still so long.
For he was in a stranger's land,
A captive far from Judah's shrine,
One of that chained and cheerless band,
A branch from off the parent vine.

His "Harp" was on the "willow" hung,
And down by "Babylonian stream"
He sat, and bitter tears were wrung
From his crushed heart reft of "hope's gleam."
* * * * * * *
What, tho' on rations short we live,
It will not the dyspepsia give;
What, tho' our quarters are too small,
Why, sure, they're better than none at all;
What, tho' at times, from too much grog,
The guard doth call a female dog
The mother of us, every one,
Since they assume that we're the son
Of ——; well, I'll say no more
On this somewhat "dogmatic score;"
But, surely, this will only show
"How vain are all things here below,"
And how one's anger may arise,
Just as a sailor d——n his eyes—
Who, surely, does not mean a thing
By any such an ugly fling.
What, tho' in dungeons we have been,
Why, surely, that can be no sin;
Since kings and queens, and mighty men
Have of[t] been thrust in wild beasts' den,
And at the tap of the "signal drum"
They're sent to reign in "Kingdom Come;"
What tho' our "lights at eight must out,"
And none allowed to walk about,
Or in the guard-house they'll be thrust
And by a sentry soundly cursed,
And flea-bit, bug-bit, fly-plagued, lame,
Come out to answer to their name,
And ask the reason why 'twas done,
And find 'twas only just in fun,
A sort of harmless, droll mistake
At which no one offence can take.

What tho' within a nameless grave,
Borne there and buried by a slave,
Unhonored rest our noble dead,
Save by the tears that friends may shed.
Will it not teach us one and all,
How great has been our country's fall—
How crushing, blasting is the blow
That lays humanity so low,
And makes oppression shew its head
E'en o'er the burial of the dead.

And will not Angels from the skies
Look down with loving, pitying eyes,
And make that "Tan Yard" holy ground;
Wild flowers and myrtle plant around;
Send sunbeams on the sacred sod;
Write, on the muster roll of God,
Just opposite the soldier's name,
"Promoted for his well-earned fame!"

What tho' our chance for quick promotion
Is not exactly to our notion,
Are some not offered elevation
Much higher than their present station;
And if on politics their hopes
What better chance to "learn the ropes."
Well, then, 'tis just as clear as mud
That we have everything that's good!

Ye Grumblers all, then hold your tongue,
You'd quarrel if you were to be hung;
Know ye not that each kind secesh
A duty hath to scourge the flesh;
What blows and knocks would on them fall
If they should scourge no one at all!
Just as the Rebel Jonah found,
When he seceded from the ground,
And went to sea on some pretence,
He must be whaled for his offence.
* * *

* The ladies of Salisbury had the body of an officer exhumed from the graveyard and buried in a "tan-yard." All officers and men dying in this garrison are now buried by slaves in the village graveyard.

The information from the prison is that most of the inmates are well. Lieut. H. C. SPENCER, of Oshkosh, Company B, Wisconsin, died on the 3d of July.

Capt. TIMOTHY O'MEARA, Company F, Forty-second New-York; Capt. GEORGE AUSTIN, Company B, Second Kentucky; JAMES B. HOFFMAN, Surgeon First New-York Artillery; GEORGE D. SLOCUM, Surgeon United States Navy, are kept in close confinement as hostages for rebel prisoners threatened with hanging. They were chosen by lot out of the whole number.

Public Opinion in Canada.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Many thanks for your manly article upon the "Union cause in Canada," in your issue of the 2d inst. It is true that there are shoals of Secessionists here, but they are Southerners, or what is worse, Northern renegades, who have run away to escape the traitor's fate. Amongst the natives and a great majority of the English people, the feelings is in favor of the Union. We see in this war, a struggle between Slavery and Freedom, and although you have not yet declared, we see that matters are fast drifting you toward emancipation. You quote the Montreal Advertiser as an authority upon public opinion, but you make a pardonable mistake in asserting this. In an obscure little alley stands a dingy, dirty old building. A sign on the outside informs the passer-by that it is the Commercial Advertiser. Who is the editor? E. H. PARSONS, a diminutive type of a certain New-York editor, who has been caricatured in one of your Budgets of Fun, by Satanic tail and caudal appendages. On his tomb-stone may be written "Here lies a man who never spoke the truth when a lie would do more injury." The sheet which makes public the daily inspiration of this wonderful genius, has a very limited circulation. Just before your difficulties commenced, it was dying for want of patrons. It was not appreciated, and but for this iniquitous rebellion, would never have appeared in italics in your editorial column. After hostilities had fairly opened, and it became difficult for Southerners to return home, they made Montreal their home. They were not long here when desirous of moulding public opinion, a journal was necessary for the advocating of their views. The only journal ready to imitate Dr. FAUST, was the Commercial Advertiser. The necessitous condition of the talented editor made him an easy prey to the influence of Southern gold. Of the principles which are purchased with filthy lucre, little that is favorable or creditable can be said. From this time the Commercial Advertiser became a violent "secesh" medium. If the New-York Herald painted in glowing colors the defects of England, the Commercial Advertiser returned the compliment with tenfold vigor. Every Northern reverse was commented upon in joyous terms, and every Northern victory was a defeat. And it continues the same Southern tone. But as soon as Southern finances are withdrawn this noble scribe will turn his goose-quill to other and, let us hope, to better purposes. But pray do not repeat the mistake of quoting the Montreal Advertiser as an exponent of Canadian opinion. If you are desirous of following the course of our public mind, you will find it reflected correctly through the able and manly editorials of the Montreal Herald, the Montreal Witness, or the Toronto Globe.

The Montreal Advertiser has the smallest circulation of any city newspaper in Canada, and, I may add, the least influence. You say truly, that nowhere has the Union warmer friends and more intelligent critics than in Canada. Although we are loyal to our Queen and country, we can sympathize and fervently wish the North success in its great struggle. Our very loyalty assists us to espouse the cause of the Government and the Consitution. We are a law-abiding people, and our veneration for constituted authority is intense. An overwhelming proportion of our people sympathize with the North. Your present difficulties are regarded as temprary. Where right and might are associated truth must prevail.

CANADIAN AND NORTHERN SYMPATHIZER.

MONTREAL, Monday, Aug. 4, 1862.

MADISON UNIVERSITY COMMENCEMENT.—The Annual Commencement of this Institution, at Hamilton, N. Y., will open on Sunday evening, Aug. 17, by a sermon before the Society for Inquiry, by Rev. Dr. EVERTS, of Chicago, On Monday evening following, will occur the Anniversary of the Æonian and Adelphian Societies. The Oration will be by the distinguished author and lecturer, GEO. WM. CURTIS, Esq.. The Poem will be given by BENJAMIN F. TAYLOR, A. M., formerly editor of the Chicago Journal. Addresses and Reports before the Education Society will be delivered on Tuesday. The Sermon will be by Rev. Dr. WESTON, of this City. The Oration before the "Alumni and Friends" will be delivered on the same evening, by Rev. REUBEN JEFFERY, D. D., of Philadelphia.

Wednesday will be "Commencement Day," when, it is said, a very fine class will graduate. In the evening will occur the usual spontaneous "Conference" of Alumni and Friends.

On Thursday will take place the Anniversary of the Theological Seminary. After the orations by the classes, a closing address will be pronounced by Rev. E. DODGE, D. D., Professor of Christian Theology.

—Miss Cornelia Oldom has made quite a reputation for herself in Kentucky, by the boldness with which she bearded the guerrillas who attacked Mt. Stirling a few days ago. The band was anxious to take possession of a fine horse which she owned, but a shot-gun which she persistently leveled at the intruders warned them off, and Miss Oldom retained her horse.

LAW REPORTS.

Question of Practice—Frivolous Defence.

SUPERIOR COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Robertson.

Lucien B. Terry et al. vs. Henry Bauge.—Plaintiffs sued defendant as the maker of four promissory notes, given in payment for certain hides purchased by defendant before he had, as is alleged, an opportunity of examining them. It is alleged that the plaintiffs represented such hides to be of a "superior quality," while after they had been tanned, they were found to be of a very inferior quality.

Defendant claims to offset this deficiency in quality, to the amount claimed by plaintiffs, and pleads, in addition, a defect of parties in that one Harbeck, who is alleged to be a member of plaintiffs' firm, is not joined as a party plaintiff. The plaintiffs, on affidavits in regard to the falsity of the answer, obtained an order to show cause why judgment should not be given on the same as frivolous, the order returnable in five days. The defendant objected to hearing that branch of the motion which asked that the answer be stricken out as sham. The objection was sustained on the ground that eight days' notice was requisite to such motion.

On the motion for judgment on the answer as frivolous, the counsel were heard, and decision reserved.

Merrill & Sherman for plaintiffs; S. T. Jones for defendant.

Timber, Eastern Spruce and Pine, ℔ M. feet, $10 25@$12 50; Rosewood, Rio, Logs, ℔ lb., 4½c.@5c.; Bird's-eye Maple, Logs, ℔ sup. foot, 5c.@6c.; Black Walnut, Logs, 4c.@4½c.; Black Walnut, Crotches, 8c.@9c.; White Oak, Logs, ℔ M. feet, $35@$40; White Oak, Plank, $35@$40; Cedar, Cuba, Logs, ℔ sup. foot, 10c.@12c.; Cedar, Florida, ℔ cubic foot, 65c.@70c.; Staves, White Oak, Pipe, Extra, ℔ M., $130; White Oak, Pipe, Light, $105; White Oak, Pipe, Heavy, $115; White Oak, Pipe, Culls, $70; White Oak, Hhd., Extra, $115; White Oak, Hhd., Heavy, $90; White Oak, Hhd., Light, $70; White Oak, Hhd., Culls, $50; White Oak, Bbl., Extra, $70; White Oak, Bbl., Heavy, $55; White Oak, Bbl., Light, $45; White Oak, Bbl., Culls, $30; Red Oak, Hhd., Heavy, $80; Red Oak, Hhd., Light, $60; Heading, White Oak, Hhd., $80. The Albany Evening Journal, of the 6th inst., says: "Lumber has come in freely during the week from all points, and has accumulated upon the yards. The sales have been fair, principally in large lots, to judicious buyers purchasing their stock, before the advance for the Fall trade, while river and Eastern freights are low. Prices are very stiff, and on some kinds an advance has been realized. Canal and lake freights are higher, and by the middle of September will be almost prohibitory for lumber on the long routes. Shipments have been light, owing to the scarcity of vessels, and freights have advanced for Eastern ports. The receipts by the Erie and Champlain Canals, during the fourth week in July, in the years named, were as follows:

	Boards and Scantling, ft.	Shingles, M.	Timber, c. ft.	Staves, ℔s.
1860	10,846,000	898	....	4,824,800

PROPOSALS.

NAVY SUPPLIES.

NAVY AGENT'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Aug. 2, 1862.

Sealed Proposals will be received at this office until SATURDAY, the ninth day of August, at 12 o'clock, for supplying 600 barrels Navy Beef, free of all cost and risk to the United States, at the Navy-yard, at Brooklyn.

The Beef must be from well-fattened cattle, and must conform as near as possible in quality to the standard assumed for Navy Beef, and pass the usual inspection of the Navy-yard. The barrels must be according to the Navy standard.

Every offer must be accompanied by a written guaranty, signed by one or more responsible persons, to the effect that he or they undertake that the bidder or bidders will, if his or their bid be accepted, enter into an obligation immediately, with good and sufficient sureties, to furnish the article proposed. This guaranty must be accompanied by the certificate of the U. S. District Judge, District-Attorneys, Collector or Navy Agent, that the guarantors are able to make good their guaranty. No proposal will be considered unless accompanied by such guaranty. Full particulars may be ascertained upon application to the Inspecting Officer at the Navy-yard.

The above Beef is purchased on account of defaulting contractors, and must be furnished without delay.

I. HENDERSON, Navy Agent.

COFFEE FOR THE NAVY.

NAVY AGENT'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, Aug. 2, 1862.

Proposals, sealed and indorsed "Proposals for Coffee," will be received at this office until SATURDAY, the 16th instant, for furnishing and delivering, on receiving ten days' notice, at the United States Navy-yard at Brooklyn, all the coffee which may be required for the use of the navy during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1863.

The coffee to be equal to the best Cuba, according to the sample at the Brooklyn Navy-yard, and be delivered there without extra charge.

Every offer must be accompanied by a written guaranty, signed by one or more responsible persons, to the effect that he or they undertake that the bidder or bidders will, if his or their bid be accepted, enter into an obligation immediately, with good and sufficient sureties, to furnish the article proposed. This guaranty must be accompanied by the certificate of the United States District Judge, District Attorney, Collector, or Navy Agent, that the guarantors are able to make good their guaranty. No proposal will be considered unless accompanied by such guaranty.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 12 Laight-st., near Canal, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospital of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. By his special experience in this much-neglected branch of medical science he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Gleet or Gonorrhœa of long standing, where all internal remedies have failed, permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance, failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD & CO., No. 12 Laight-st., the only place.

SURE CURE.—DR. POWERS, SUCCESSFULLY consulted with Dr. WARD, No. 12 Laight-st. He gives advice free, and guarantees an immediate cure or no pay. Glorious triumph of medicine. Dr. POWERS' sure specific remedies for syphilitic, mercurial and all other deli cate diseases; for certainty unapproached, and for the entire eradication of disease, nothing besides can positively be relied upon; try them and be convinced. Dr. POWERS' Essence of Life restores the vigor of youth in four weeks. This marvelous agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitutions. Office No. 12 Laight-st. Dr. POWERS' French Preventive, the greatest invention of the age. Those who have used them are never without them. Price, $1 per dozen; mailed free on receipt of the price. Address Dr. POWERS, No. 12 Laight-st.

DR. F. HOLLICK, AUTHOR OF THE "MARRIAGE GUIDE," &c., and Lecturer on Physiology and the Origin of Life. Office, No. 559 Broadway, New-York City. Hours, 10 till 2, daily, except Sundays.

Dr. H. attends only to those peculiar cases of Nervous and Parental Debility and decay, or natural imperfection, explained in his books and lectures.

N. B.—Persons in the country should especially observe that Dr. H. never leaves New-York City. Those who wish to address him by letter, should direct "Dr. F. HOLLICK, Box No 3,696 New-York City Post-office."

Some of the most curious and important cases are explained in Dr. H.'s "Facts for the Feeble," which will be sent gratis, and post-paid, to any address.

DR. COBBETT, MEMBER OF THE N. Y. University, (Medical College,) and Royal College of Surgeons, London, has removed from No. 19 Duane-st., to his present very convenient suite of offices at No. 29 Centre-st., between Chambers and Reade sts., with a private entrance at No. 6 City Hall-place, where he can be consulted with the most honorable confidence on all diseases affecting the urinary organs; thirty years in his present specialty, (three of which have been at the Hospitals of this City,) enable him to guarantee a cure in every case undertaken, or make no charge. Strictures of the urethra, impotency, seminal weaknesses, &c., treated on the most scientific principles. N. B.—As a proof of Dr. C.'s qualifications, he would call special attention to his Diplomas, which can be seen in his office.

IMPORTANT TO THE MARRIED AND THOSE ABOUT TO BE MARRIED.—Dr. A. M. MACREAD, Professor of Diseases of Women, has just published the 160th edition of the valuable book, entitled "THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION," strictly intended for those whose health or circumstances forbid a too rapid increase of family. MADAME WOODS, DOCTRESS, IS CONsulted by ladies with confidence; also, by letter. She has long treated female complaints. Monthly pills. No. 276 Grand-st., near Chrystie.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

A BEAUTIFUL MICROSCOPE, MAGNIFYING 500 times for 28 cents, (coin;) five of different powers for $1. Mailed free. Address F. O. BOWEN Box No. 220, Boston, Mass.

ROGERS against DE LANCEY KENEDY and others.—In pursuance of the judgment in the above-entitled action, I will sell at public auction, at the Merchants' Exchange Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, in the City of New-York, on the 8th day of August, 1862, at 12 o'clock noon, by A. J. BLEECKER, SON & CO., Auctioneers, all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land, situate, lying and being in the Sixteenth Ward of the City of New-York, and bounded as follows: Beginning at the corner formed by the intersection of the southerly side of Fifteenth-street with the easterly side of the Seventh-avenue, running thence easterly along the southerly side of Fifteenth-street, seventy-seven feet, thence southerly and parallel with Seventh-avenue twenty-two feet and seven and three-

TERRIBLE DISASTER ON THE PACIFIC.

The Steamship Golden Gate Destroyed by Fire.

One Hundred and Eighty Lives Lost.

Over a Million in Treasure on Board---Uncertainty as to its Loss.

Dispatches reached this City yesterday announcing the destruction of the steamship Golden Gate by fire. She left San Francisco, July 21, for Panama, with two hundred and thirty passengers, $1,114,000 in treasure for New-York, and $270,000 for England. She was burnt at sea July 27, and one hundred and eighty passengers, twenty of her crew, and all the treasure lost.

The following are the telegraphic dispatches received:

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.

TO WM. L. HALSEY, No. 8 WALL-STREET: I was saved from the burning ship by lashing myself to the forecastle ladder and jumping overboard; passed under port wheel, while under way, and received serious injury; was picked up by the ship's boat; remained in it twenty hours before reaching Manzanilla. Poor FLINT was lost. Will return overland. Telegraph to my family about my safety and health.

BENJAMIN HALLADAY.

MR. HALLADAY is of the firm of HALLADAY & FLINT, owners of the California and Oregon steamship line.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.

To Allen McLane, President:

Golden Gate burned at sea near Manzanilla. Two hundred passengers and crew perished. Ship total loss. Particulars as soon as possible.

FORBES & BABCOCK.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.

To Eugene Kelly & Co:

Steamship Golden Gate, which sailed hence 21st July, took fire twelve miles off Manzanilla, and was burnt to the water's edge. About two hundred passengers lost.

EDWARD FLINT gone. BEN. HALLADAY and Capt. WHITNEY saved. It is thought the treasure will be saved, as the ship was beached.

EUGENE FLINT, formerly of New-York, went out in February, 1861. Left a wife in this City; was a middle-aged man.

An interruption in the telegraph line east of Salt Lake, has prevented the reception as yet of the particulars of this terrible disaster. The wires are momentarily expected to be in working order. The fullest details will be obtained from San Francisco as early as possible.

The Golden Gate was a side-wheel steamer of 2,067 tons. Her length was 145 feet, breadth 25 feet, and drift 16 feet. She was built in this City in 1850, by W. H. WEBB, and was remodeled in 1859. Two oscillating engines, having two cylinders of 85 inches diameter, with 8 feet stroke of piston, furnished her motive power. On the shipping register she ranks A 2, and the provisions made for security against fire are noted as insufficient.

She was one of the finest boats on the route between Panama and San Francisco, and was a favorite with the traveling public. She was noted for her police regulations, and the rules in relation to fire were well defined, and made plain to all her crew and passengers. It was customary on this route to exercise the passengers and crew in fire duty.

The Golden Gate was a fast vessel and could accommodate about 900 passengers, besides a large quantity of freight. She carried from eight to twelve boats, sufficient to carry several hundred persons. She was repaired in 1856, '58, '59, and latterly she had been put in excellent order.

THE INSURANCES.

It is thought here that the vessel is not insured, but most of the specie is. The regular shippers of specie have usually open policies, and the consignees here have no means of knowing the amount of insurance until the arrival of the mail. The vessel is worth from $80,000 to $90,000, at the highest.

NO LATER NEWS.

We are indebted to Mr. BOWLES, the telegraph operator at Buffalo, for the following:

"The California line is down west of Julesburgh. There is no prospect of getting anything through to-night. There is a great storm progressing west."

CHICAGO, Thursday, Aug. 7—10 P. M.

There is no prospect of getting a report of the Golden Gate disaster to-night. The line is down between Overland City and Fort Laramie.

NEWS FROM SAN FRANCISCO.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Tuesday, Aug. 5.

The ship Wild Pigeon sailed for Valparaiso today.

The bark E. A. Rawlings, in the employ of the Government, was recently wrecked at the mouth of the Colorado River. She had a cargo of commissary stores, valued at $200,000.

The work on the new levee around Sacramento is progressing energetically. The levee will cost over $300,000, and is to be from eight to ten feet high, and of sufficient strength to leave no room for apprehension of future inundations.

The first train of overland emigrants from Iowa arrived last week at Powder River mines, Oregon. They experienced no trouble on the road, getting along without difficulty. Three companies of Oregon cavalry had gone out to meet them.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Wednesday, Aug. 6.

The confiscated ship Henry Brigham was sold by the United States Marshal yesterday, for $15,000.

A dividend has been declared by the Ophir Silver Mining Company for the month ending on the 5th inst., amounting to $72 per foot. Shares in the mines are now selling for $2,400 per foot.

Extremely flattering accounts are being received of all the principal silver mines in Nevada Territory.

The bullion receipts are large, and the stock is going up, and there is danger of a speculative furore.

The Overland Mail Company's coaches have commenced arriving. Since the recent change of route, the trip from St. Joseph to Salt Lake has been made in seven days. There is a prospect that the average time from St. Louis to San Francisco will be nineteen days, and that the whole ocean mail from New-York to San Francisco, will come through in twenty-five days.

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—An absurdly funny burlesque, by Mr. H. J. BYRON, called "Eily O'Connor; or, the Fatal Dip," was produced at Wallack's Theatre last evening. By the title we can guess at once that Mr. BOURCICAULT'S successful drama of the "Colleen Bawn" is the piece burlesqued—and admirably well it is done. The principal scenes and incidents are adhered to with the strictest fidelity, which are recognized at once, and by their quaint resemblance to the original, keep the house in a constant state of cacchination. MRS. FLORENCE, as Myles-na-Coppaleen; Miss V. CROCKER, as Hardress Cregan; Mr. W. DAVIDGE, as Danny Mann, and Mr. FLORENCE, as Eily O'Connor, are excellent. So good is the last-named gentleman, that he must be classed among the best burlesque actors of the day.

BENEFIT OF MESSRS. A. H. DAVENPORT AND J. W. COLLIER.—This evening Messrs. A. H. DAVENPORT and J. W. COLLIER take a joint benefit at the Winter Garden. A most attractive bill has been provided. The services of that charming little actress, Miss MAGGIE MITCHELL, have been procured, and she will appear in "Fanchon," Mr. DAVENPORT and Mr. COLLIER supporting her, in the respective rôles of Didier and Landry Barbeau. Other entertainments of an amusing character will also be produced, which, combined, cannot fail to attract a large and crowded audience.

More Sick and Wounded.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Aug. 7.

The steamship Vanderbilt has arrived, with 450 sick and wounded soldiers from Harrison's Landing.

THE NEW CALL FOR TROOPS.

MILITARY MATTERS IN THE CITY.

Organization of the New Troops—The Draft—Payment of Bounties—Progress of Enlistments.

ORGANIZATION OF THE NEW TROOPS.

All the men raised under the President's requisition for three hundred thousand men for three years or the war, that can be so used legitimately, will be used to fill up the depleted ranks of the old regiments now in the field. Faith will of course be kept with new regiments which can, quite or nearly complete their organization by the 15th inst., but there is little doubt that all bodies of recruits existing in a fragmentary condition on that date, will be rendered available in the readiest way that offers. It is calculated that this three hundred thousand—all of whom are confidently expected to come in voluntarily—will be sufficient to carry into effect the military measures immediately resolved upon at Washington. The second three hundred thousand, which are to be raised by a prompt draft of the enrolled militia, will probably not be called into active service—not the whole of them, at any rate. They will more likely be used for garrison duty, and, to some extent, as a reserve from which occasional detachments can be drawn to strengthen any given point or army. Until the early part of Winter they will, it is said, be retained hard at work in camps of instruction, there to be thoroughly disciplined in the school of the soldier, and made fit, by the end of their term, to form the commissioned and non-commissioned nuclei for fresh drafts for active and re-serve duty.

The General Orders from the War Department, indicating the details of what is desired in this quarter, are perhaps now on their way to the States. These will as little as possible interfere with the independent action of the State authorities. Governors and State Inspectors are to follow their own devices in obtaining the citizens of their several Commonwealths, for service in the common cause of the Union; but they will be tendered suggestions, and have revealed to them the wishes of the President and the President's military advisers.

What is to be done with the militia regiments from this City, who lately responded to the President's call for three months' volunteers, is not yet positively known. The War Department, there is no question, will keep faith with them, and muster them out of the general service at the end of the term for which their aid was asked. Their friends claim that the State, too, tacitly agreed that that term should not be exceeded, except in some more extraordinary emergency than has yet occurred. The State authorities only will have to decide how this is; whether the three months' men are a part of the State quota, and liable to a six months' extension of service, or whether they may not take advantage of being early in the field as a set-off for the briefer spell of duty required of them. Possibly all parties in all the States will be satisfied if the green and inexperienced levy of three hundred thousand be officered by this now partly-trained thirty thousand of three-monthers. No more politic disposition could be made of the matter. Under any circumstances it is not to be supposed the new force can be organized in less than a month, and between now and then circumstances may either warrant the authorities in relaxing the anticipated sternness of its measures, or may compel them more rigid and comprehensive enforcement.

PROSPECTS OF DRAFT NO. 1.

From present appearances there is reason to believe that the three hundred thousand men required for three years will be all raised by volunteering before the 15th inst. Recruiting has improved so much, since the choice of being drafted without bounty, or of volunteering with it, was offered to those who are to fill up the ranks of the army, that it is generally predicted the latter course will be followed by enough men to render a conscription for the long term needless. Perhaps the payment of bounty will be continued for a few days past the 15th, with the more reason that it is almost certain Maj. PINCKNEY will be unable to complete his scheme of enrollment by that date. Excitement concerning the draft has almost disappeared. Only the Southern sympathizers and foreigners in our midst still exhibit any perturbation on the subject. Some of the former declare they will resist conscription to the death; that it will take two of their own men to make each of them fight a rebel, and so forth. Gentlemen of this persuasion will be settled with in very short order. Foreigners are anxious and besiege their Consuls; but their right to exemption will be respected, and complications with foreign Governments carefully avoided. The County Clerk's office was not crowded so much yesterday, and Mr. ARCHIBALD had a much easier time of it. The calculation is that the majority of those claiming exemption have already filed their certificates.

PROGRESS OF THE CHRISTIAN COMPANY.

An adjourned meeting of the Christian public, interested in the establishment of a company of Christian young men, to enlist for the war, was held last evening at Dr. BURCHARD'S Church, in Thirteenth-street. JAMES W. FARR, Esq., Presided, and Mr. ST. JOHN opened the exercises with prayer. A letter was read from Dr. BURCHARD, excusing himself for non-attendance, and expressing his sympathy with the cause, and his confidence in the ability of Capt. HOWLAND to fitly command the "Monitors." Mr. J. A. MAPES was chosen Secretary, and read a letter from B. J. LOSSING, of similar purport to that of Dr. BURCHARD.

After spirited addresses by Rev. Mr. ST. JOHN and MATTHEW HALE SMITH, a full discussion was had of the best plan of procedure. Remarks were made by Capt. HOWLAND, Mr. FARR, Mr. ST. JOHN and others. It was decided that as there are but fourteen men on the rolls now, more active recruiting efforts are necessary. It was generally understood that young men inclined to moral habits would be acceptable, and that it would perhaps be better to get an authorization to raise the company for some regiment now in the field. The fund is now over $1,000, and ample inducements of good associations as well as of extra bounties are offered to young men to recruit. It was finally resolved to appoint a Committee of Five to coöperate actively with Capt. HOWLAND in obtaining recruits for the company. The meeting adjourned sine die, with the understanding that a recruiting office will be opened and practical measures taken to fill up the company within eight days—before the draft.

THE MONITORS—HEADQUARTERS AT No. 308 BROADWAY.—Young men willing to serve their country, and desirous of uniting with a company of sober and moral, as well as fighting men, are earnestly invited to enroll themselves. Capt. HOWLAND, the Commandant, is an old Seventh Regiment officer, competent as a soldier, and careful of his men.

GOV. MORGAN IN THE PARK.

His Excellency the Governor yesterday paid a visit to the Park Barracks, through which institution he was conducted by Capt. ABEL, and he is said to have been much pleased with the inspection. During the day, a number of convalescent soldiers passed resolutions thanking the officials in charge of the Barracks for the kind treatment they had received. A great many recovered invalids are constantly reporting for duty, and are at once sent to Fort Hamilton, from whence, when collected in sufficient force, they are dispatched to the field of active operations.

THE FIRST REGIMENT NATIONAL VOLUNTEERS.

Col. WM. GURNEY, the commandant of the First Regiment National Volunteers, the headquarters of which are at Mozart Hall, No. 314 Broadway, offers to pay an extra bounty of $5, in addition to the Government and State bounties now offered. Col. GURNEY is well and favorably known in this City as having been connected for many years with the Seventh Regiment, National Guard. At the commencement of the rebellion he raised a company for Col. COCHRAN'S Regiment, and was afterward detailed for special duty. Young, active, able-bodied young men cannot do better than join this organization.

THE SIXTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT COMMITTEE.

A meeting of the Sixth Senatorial District Committee was held yesterday, at the City Hall, Mr. KELLY in the chair. Reports relative to enlistments, from the several recruiting stations in the District, were handed in, which showed a great increase in the matter of recruiting. No further business of importance having to be transacted, the Committee adjourned till Monday next.

NOMINATION OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL TO THE FIFTH SENATORIAL DISTRICT REGIMENT.

The Fifth Senatorial District Committee have nominated Capt. JOHN T. LOCKMAN, Company H, Ninth Regiment, N. Y. S. M., Lieutenant-Colonel of the regiment now being organized under their auspices, under command of Col. PRISSNER.

THE PRODUCE EXCHANGE REGIMENT.

Mr. ADON SMITH, Jr., of No. 3 South-street, has been appointed Treasurer of the New-York Produce Exchange Regiment. All persons desirous of aiding in the raising of this regiment can send contributions to Mr. SMITH'S office.

THE IRISH BRIGADE.

Gen. MEAGHER'S period of leave, for special purposes of recruiting, is nearly expired. All who wish to join that gallant band must do so immediately. All recruits will report at headquarters, No. 398 Broadway, on Saturday next, the 9th, at 10 A. M. And all officers on leave, as well as non-commissioned officers and privates, unless sick and unable, will be at headquarters at 10 A. M., to meet the General previous to his leaving for the Army of the Potomac.

THE EXEMPTION PANIC—NOTES OF A LOOKER-ON.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Quack Doctors, and Commissioners of Deeds, and Notaries Public, have formed copartnerships all over the City, and are doing a big business in the exemption line. The Doctor certifies that, in his judgment, they, the dupes, are all unfit or disqualified for military duty, and the Commissioner or Notary swears them to the fact, and charges from one to five dollars as the dupe will bleed. Who cares? A man once got up a fine business by charging strangers a half-dollar each to show them across the Park. The merits of the two occupations are about alike. And how is it? The County Clerk of Brooklyn, Kings County, as well as the Clerks of every other county in the State, as we are informed, charge nothing for filing exemption papers, on the ground that there is no law for it, except HARRY GENET, our County Clerk, who persists in charging thirteen cents for every certificate filed. This item, from present appearances, will amount to from seventy to one hundred thousand dollars. Query—Have we a Supervisor Blunt enough to investigate the question as to what pocket this lob should fall? The County Clerk receives a salary from the County of $3,000 a year, in addition to which, the duties he performs for the State amount to about $2,000 a year, and by law he pockets all the money he receives for searches, which has never been less than $10,000 a year, (contracted by him out at that.) But it seems, in times of war, those who grab the most are the best fellows.

Over the sea of heads pressed into the County Clerk's Office, yesterday, for the purpose of filing "Exemption papers," a slip of paper came fluttering from a desk far back behind the railings, occupied by a record searcher, who says nothing to nobody, containing the following:

All honor to this eager band,
Who rush to save their native land.
Suspend your praise and breathe contempt,
They rush—to prove they are exempt.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Aug. 7, 1862. B.

CRUSH THE REBELLION.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I will give (in addition to the bounty allowed by the United States, State and City of New-York) twenty-five dollars ($25) to each of the first five recruits, who, after this date and before the 15th inst., shall be accepted in the brigades of either Gen. SICKLES or Gen. MEAGHER. The money to be paid on their being mustered into the service of the United States, on the certificate of the Captain of the Company.

THE POLICE COMMISSIONERS AND THE WAR.

PATRIOTIC ADDRESS TO THE FORCE—TWO REGIMENTS TO BE RAISED BY AND FROM THE MEMBERS.

At a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners, held yesterday, on motion of Commissioner BOWEN, it was

Resolved, That the following address be distributed to the Captains of Police, and publicly read to the Force of the respective Precincts:

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE POLICE FORCE.

You comprise, as members of the Police, 2,300 able-bodied men, in the prime of life, and in the highest physical condition. You are receiving for the performance of important, but not onerous duties, from $800 to $1,200 a year, while more than half a million of your fellow-citizens are in the field fighting for the existence of the Government. It is right and proper that you should bear a portion of the public burden, by either going into the field yourselves or by contributing to the support of those who do. It is the intention of the Board of Police to place at least two regiments in the field. One is nearly completed; the other will be commenced immediately, and it is designed to make it the best regiment of the State, in respect to discipline and the personal character of its members.

For this Regiment the members of the force are invited to volunteer. The Board of Police will reserve the places they may temporarily vacate, and restore them, on their return with an honorable discharge, to the rank they now occupy.

Such members of the force as are indisposed or are unable to volunteer are invited to contribute on the next pay-day for the purpose of defraying the expenses of raising the contemplated Regiment as follows:

Captains of Police	$20	Patrolmen	$10
Sergeants	15	Doormen	8

The payments to be made to the Chief Clerk through the Captains of Police, who will furnish to the Chief Clerk the names of contributors.

For the support of the families of policemen who are now in military service, or who may now volunteer, it is proposed there shall be the following contributions monthly, on the basis of 300 volunteers from the force:

Captains, $3 per month.
Sergeants, $2 per month.
Patrolmen, $1 50 per month.
Doormen, $1 per month.

To be paid in like manner to the Chief Clerk. If a less number than three hundred volunteer, then the monthly payment to be reduced in the same ratio.

By order of the Board of Police.

JAMES BOWEN, President.

To the last-named fund Mr. BOWEN contributes to the extent of $500.

WHAT MASSACHUSETTS IS DOING.

GREAT WAR MEETING AT TREMONT TEMPLE, BOSTON.

BOSTON, Wednesday, Aug. 6.

An immense war meeting was held this evening, in Tremont Temple, at which several thousand people were present.

Hon. EDWARD EVERETT was the principal speaker, and made a most eloquent and patriotic address, strongly denouncing the idea of giving up the contest. He might once have been in favor of peaceful separation, but that time had passed, and now the Union must be restored, at whatever cost. Speeches were made by Lieut.-Col. WELLS of the Massachusetts First, Father SCULLY, Capt. MAHAN of the Massachusetts Ninth, Hon. GEO. B. UPTON, Hon. LEVERETT SALTONSTALL, and other gentlemen. There were quite a number of enlistments.

NEW REGIMENTS FOR THE WAR—ORGANIZATION OF NINE MONTHS' MEN.

BOSTON, Thursday, Aug. 7.

In accordance with the request of many citizens, Gov. ANDREW has authorized the organization of a new Boston regiment for the war, to consist of ten companies of infantry, two of rifles, and a battery of artillery. Lieut.-Col. BATCHELDER, of the Thirteenth Massachusetts, is to be the Colonel, and the Governor suggests that the regiment be mainly officered from soldiers now in the field, who have earned the right of promotion for gallant services.

The Second Battalion of Infantry, "Boston Tigers," are to be increased to a regiment, for nine months' service. Major C. L. HOLBROOK is to be the Colonel. A general desire is expressed that the whole militia of Massachusetts be organized, armed and equipped, and held in readiness for the call of the Government. The people seem determined to make war their special business until a peace is conquered.

Gov. ANDREW has granted permission to the Independent Cadets and the Fourth Battalion of Infantry to form the nucleus of two new regiments for nine months' service.

RECRUITING IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Thursday, Aug. 7.

The merchants of Milk, Franklin, Kilby, and other leading streets, including nearly all the heavy business houses, have signed an agreement to close their stores and counting-rooms every afternoon during the whole of next week, to assist in filling up the quota of Boston, under the call for 300,000 three years' volunteers. The old South Church proprietors have agreed to throw open their grounds around their edifice, and display a starry flag that has a revolutionary history. Tents and pavilions will be erected for headquarters, and recruiting will be the order of the day throughout the city.

TROOPS TO LEAVE FOR THE SEAT OF WAR.

BOSTON, Thursday, Aug. 17.

The Thirty-third Regiment, Col. MAGGI, will leave for the seat of war on Monday, and the Thirty-fourth Regiment on Tuesday, of next week. Both regiments go with full ranks, and are splendidly equipped.

WHAT IS DOING IN NEW-YORK.

THE FIRST NEW-YORK REGIMENT UNDER THE CALL.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Thursday, Aug. 7.

The regiment for this Senatorial District, Col. VAN VALKENBURGH, reached the minimum standard several days since, and has been officially designated the One Hundred and Seventh Regiment New-York State Volunteers. A request has been received from the President, through Secretary STANTON, that Col. VAN VALKENBURGH proceed with his command as soon as possible to Washington, and the regiment will probably leave next Wednesday morning. The One Hundred and Seventh is the first Regiment from the State under the July call.

RECRUITING IN ONEIDA.

UTICA, Friday, Aug. 7.

Capt. ALVIN WHITE, Co. A, Fourth Oneida Regiment, reports 108 men.

Over 600 men are mustered in for the regiment, and most of them are in camp.

WAR MEETING AT SCRANTON, PENN.

SCRANTON, Penn., Thursday, Aug. 7.

An immense war meeting was held here last night. The speakers were Hon. G. A. GROW and Hon. W. W. KETCHUM. The neighboring towns of Dunmore, Providence and Hyde Park sent delegations headed by bands of music, &c., &c. The greatest enthusiasm was manifested.

One hundred and fifteen men have enlisted here up to 9 o'clock this morning. They refuse to take the bounty.

FLIGHT OF BALTIMORE REBELS.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Aug. 7.

Quite a stampede is in progress from this city of parties eager to escape the draft. Some are going to Europe, many to Canada, and others to various Northern States. Many leading Secessionists are disappearing for parts unknown.

MAINE.

HER QUOTA MORE THAN FULL.

BRUNSWICK, Wednesday, Aug. 6.

A very large war meeting was held here tonight. Speeches were made by Prof. HITCHCOCK, of New-York, and others.

It was announced, semi-officially, that four companies over and above Maine's quota had already enlisted.

The Turf.

TROTTING ON FASHION COURSE.

A trotting match for $500, mile heats, best 3 in 5, took place yesterday, on the Fashion Course. The contest was between two very fine road horses, belonging to gentlemen well known in turf circles, and was, on that account, of unusual interest to a large circle of their friends. The affair was well contested, the horses running side by side during part of the heats, but the winner was never headed, and won in three straight heats, and in excellent time.

GREAT TROTTING MATCH FOR $5,000 A SIDE.

A match was made yesterday at the Fashion Course for $5,000, mile heats, best three in five, between two horses, in the stables of Mr. HORACE F. JONES and Mr. ROWE, (owner of Ethan Allen.) It is to come off on Sept. 10.

THE DOUBLE TEAM TROTTING MATCH TO-DAY.

It will be seen by the advertisement that a very exciting trot takes place to-day on the Fashion Course. It is between three double teams, and for $1,000; the entries being by S. MCLAUGHLIN, H. WOODRUFF and D. MACE. The affair has created great interest among turfmen, and will, no doubt, draw a large number of spectators to the track.

Base Ball.

GOTHAM VS. CHARTER OAK.

These clubs played a match yesterday at Hoboken, which resulted in favor of the Gothams, after a well-fought contest on both sides. The senior club of the Association—the Gotham—has regenerated itself, and now plays a very strong game. In this match, the new first-base man distinguished himself almost as much as Mr. WADSWORTH. Messrs. BURTIS and MOORE made home runs. A very large number of persons were present to witness the match, which was conducted with good temper.

Yachting.

A yacht race for a sweepstakes of $600 took place yesterday, between five yachts of the Brooklyn Yacht Club and one belonging to the Jersey City Yacht Club, in which the latter came off victorious.

The entrees were as follows:

Names.	Length.	Builders.
Wardlaw	26ft.	Henry Smedley.
Alfred Partridge	26ft.	H. Smedley.
Rachel	26ft. 5in.	P. McGeihan.
Laura	26ft. 11in.	H. Smedley.
Commodore	27ft. 10in.	Sol Smedley and Lennox.
Nonpareil	28ft. 8in.	David Kirby.

The yachts were cat-rigged—mainsail—and sailed ten miles to windward and back, the course being from the Brooklyn Yacht Club House, South Brooklyn, to Buoy No. 9, on the tail end of the West Bank in the Lower Bay. The wind was from southeast which allowed the yachts to lay their course close-hauled to the fort on Staten Island, below the Narrows, when they made one tack to the eastward, and rounded the buoy, after which they started sheet and reached the Club House with a free wind. The yachts started in order, as in the above list, at intervals of half a minute, and the Rachel overhauled the Partridge a quarter of a mile below Fort Diamond, and rounded the buoy five minutes ahead of the Laura, the Partridge close on, the Nonpareil five minutes later, Wardlaw two minutes, and Commodore fourteen minutes still later.

The yachts arrived home as follows: Rachel in 3 hours, 19 minutes, 7 seconds; Laura, 3 hours, 27 minutes, 46 seconds; Nonpareil, 3 hours, 28 minutes, 17 seconds; Partridge, 3 hours, 40 minutes, 27 seconds; Wardlaw, 3 hours, 33 minutes, 23 seconds; Commodore, 3 hours, 48 minutes, 35 seconds. The Rachel came in a very easy winner over the Brooklyn yachts, which are very hollow in the bow, and proportionably sharp. Mr. MCGEIHAN has his yacht-building establishment at the basin in which the yachts of the Jersey City Yacht Club are moored, many of which he has built. His lines are fuller and very symmetrical, and he makes excellent sea boats. The Rachel was sailed by the veteran Capt. WM. SMITH, of New-Jersey, in splendid style; and such a shaking of hands as the old salt got at the conclusion of the race, must have been very satisfactory to him.

The wind was just enough for the yachts to stand up to without reefing, and a steam-tug was chartered for the judges and a large number of spectators. Numerous other yachts accompanied the regatta.

The schooner Dart, of the Hoboken Yacht Club, Capt. PITCHER, with her owner and a party of gentlemen, sailed last night for the Sound, to join the New-York Yacht Squadron on its annual cruise. She is just off the ways and looks as fine as a fiddle.

The New Comet.

The following observations of Comet II. Delta, 1862, made at the Dudley Observatory, by G. W. HOUGH, Assistant, have been handed to us for publication:

This comet was discovered at the Dudley Observatory, by Mr. THOMAS SIMONS, on the evening of the 18th July.

The observations on the 25th and 26th were made with the Olcott Meridian Circle at the Lower Culmination.

15 wires were used for A. R., and the time of transit recorded on the chronograph by the magnetic method.

The observations are not corrected for parallax.
